"COTTON WILL GO UP TO 25 CENTS"

Startling Claims Are Made by Leading Inspector

CROP IS 30 DAYS LATE

Local Cotton Buyer Adds His Opinion to Southern Bullish Report.

"That cotton will command fifteen cents next fall is a 'cinch' that it will reach twenty cents is a strong probability, and that it will go to twenty-five cents is a 10 to 1 shot," was the startling announcement made in a letter received yesterday by W. H. Stafford, a prominent Oklahoma City cotton buyer, from F. M. Cordell, a member of the New Orleans cotton exchange and one of the most reliable cotton crop inspectors in the south.

The writer adds that he has just returned to New Orleans from a personal inspection of the cotton region of Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

"It is very poor," is his comment. "The crop is 30 days late, with very poor stand. Chopping will not be finished before July 1, while the ground is 'packed' and cloudy and the fields grassy."

The bullish condition of cotton in the central region has its reflection in Oklahoma, where crop conditions are to a considerable degree similar.

M. M. Binkley, a local cotton buyer who has recently returned from an inspection trip over the cotton belt of Oklahoma and Indian Territory reports that the crop is three weeks late.

"East of Oklahoma City," he said, "only five per cent of the cotton has been chopped, five per cent is just peeping out of the ground and the balance is in the weeds."

SWEARS OUT WARRANT

Both Left Children. Runaways Traced From Coyle to Perry.

Special to The Oklahoman.

Guthrie, Okla., June 22.—R. F. Hall, a tenant on the farm of Frank Whipple, living near Coyle, swore out a warrant here today for the arrest of Whipple, with whom Hall claims his wife, Mrs. Pearl Hall, eloped last Wednesday night.

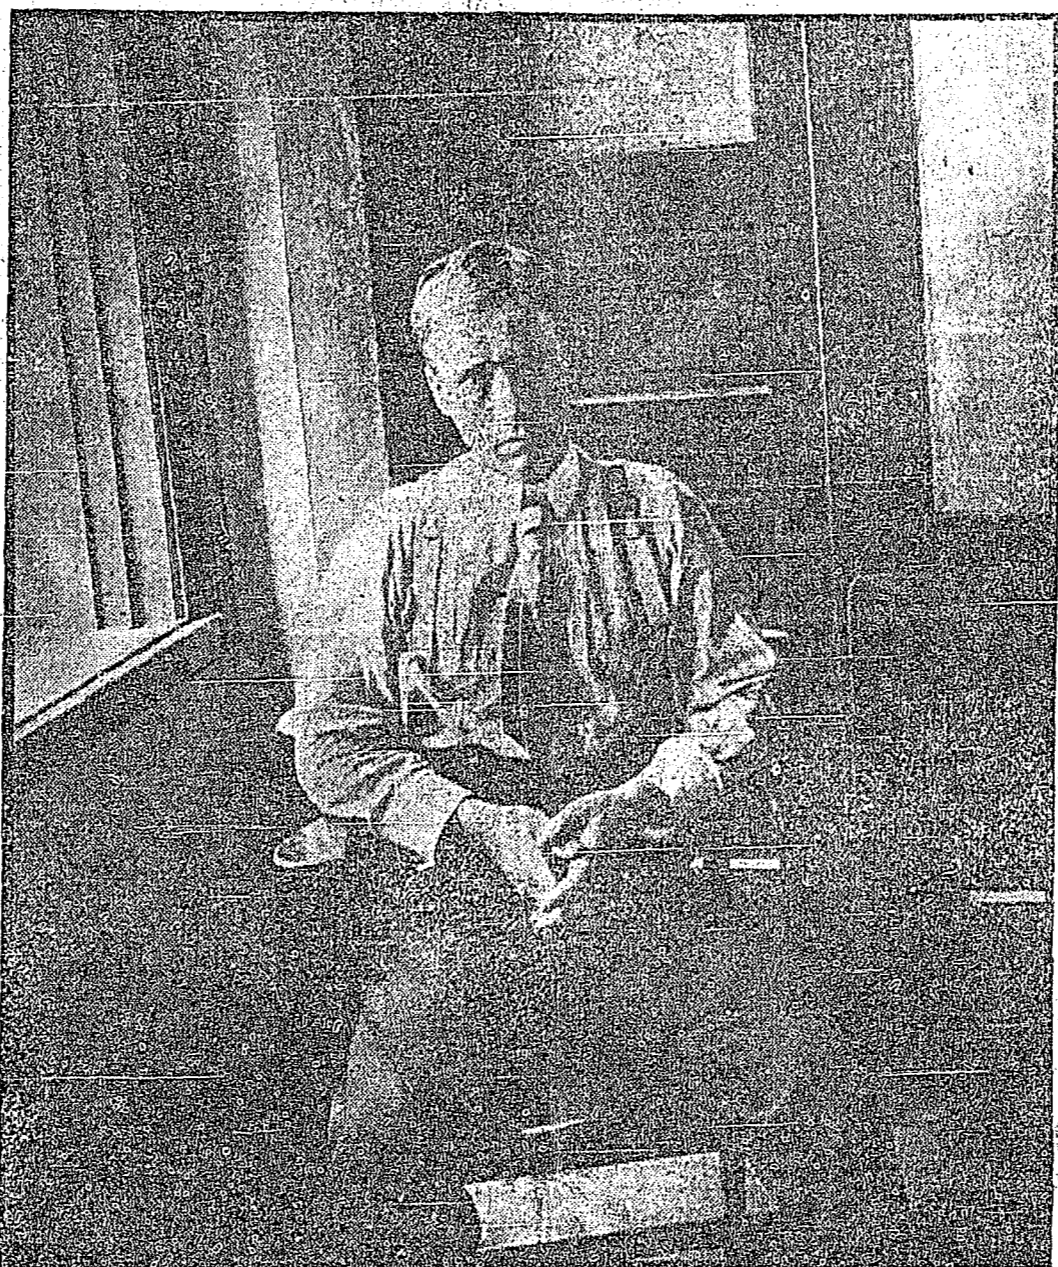

Suit also was filed by Hall here today against Whipple for $10,000 damages for alienating his wife's affections.

Whipple owns a $10,000 farm and is one of the best known farmers in the Coyle neighborhood. He has a wife and a seven-year-old daughter. Mrs. Hall left her husband and three small children, the youngest being only three years old.

Sheriff Bart Murphy traced the runaways to the Daily hotel here, where they are supposed to have remained over Wednesday night, and then left the city early Thursday morning.

Later they were seen in Perry.

WIFE OF MURDERED MAN TO BE GIVEN OPPORTUNITY TO TELL WHATEVER SHE KNOWS

Day Devoted to Ceaseless Sweating, but Expected Confession Is Not Forthcoming

—Coroner's Inquest Tomorrow

BODY FINDERS TO RELATE STORY

Mrs. Ida Meadows, wife of the man whose murdered body was found Friday night buried in a shallow grave three miles west of Capitol Hill, where it had been placed by the assassin who lured the late foreman of the construction gang for the Pioneer Telephone company, to his death on the night of June 4, will be placed on the witness stand at the coroner's inquest tomorrow morning, to tell what she knows of the crime.

Rudolph Tegeler, who has confessed that he has been the Meadows woman's lover for the last ten months, and who is locked up in the county jail accused of complicity in the crime, will also be a witness.

Miss Laura Keith, the woman who has been Mrs. Meadows' nurse and constant companion in the rooming house at 118½ North Broadway, will be subpoenaed to tell the coroner's jury anything that she may know concerning the tragedy, which cost Meadows his life.

These subpoenas will be issued today, and although the officers do not entertain much hope that these three witnesses will give much information that will be of service in solving the cloud of mystery which still surrounds the death of Meadows, an effort will be made to induce them to tell all that they know.

It is not expected that the verdict of the coroner's jury will do other than to state that "J. R. Meadows came to his death at the hands of persons unknown to this jury."

Other witnesses who will appear to testify at the time of the inquest will be the officers who have worked on the case since the disappearance of Meadows on the night of June 4, members of the party who exhumed the body from the spot where the assassin had buried it, officials of the telephone company who have identified the dead body as being that of Meadows, and associates of Tegeler, who worked with him at the new pumping station of the city water works plant.

Among these witnesses will be Chief of Police Charles Post, Todd Warden, assistant chief of police, an official of the Western Detective service, who has had charge of the investigation for the telephone company; Webb Jones, a detective employed by the agency; R. A. Hardwick, construction foreman for the Pioneer Telephone company, under whom Meadows worked; J. W. McKann, one of his associates in the telephone work; J. W. Bennett, chief engineer at the new pumping station where Tegeler was employed, and Charles Roberts, also one of Tegeler's associates at the pumping station, and to whom he talked perhaps more freely than to any one else.

All of yesterday afternoon County Attorney Hayes spent in "sweating" the three persons who have been lodged in the county jail charged with complicity in the awful crime. One at a time, they were taken before him and subjected to a searching cross-examination by the county prosecutor, but with practically no results.

Tegeler sticks to the story that he told the officers, to the effect that he located the body only by means of the diagram which he says that he copied at the instance of parties unknown to him, and that he knows nothing further of the crime.

Mrs. Meadows insists that she loved her husband, and that she does not know Tegeler, and has never been intimate with him, and that she has not the slightest idea as to the identity of her husband's murderers.

Miss Laura Keith still protests her ignorance of any of the details connected with the crime, and insists that she knows nothing which will make her services as a witness of value to the officials.

"There has been nothing in the nature of confession gained from any of the three now under arrest this afternoon," said County Attorney Hayes last evening. "I had them all before me separately, and examined them as to their knowledge of the details connected with the case, but none of them broke down and practically nothing of value was learned from any of them. We got a few new points of information, but each one of the three still stoutly protests innocence."

"All three of them will be called as witnesses, to appear before the coroner's jury when the inquest is held Monday morning."

Coroner R. F. Scheerer empaneled the jury which will preside at the inquest Monday morning, yesterday, foremen, and the members viewed the body in the undertaking establishment of J. H. Marshall company, 129 North Broadway. The jury is composed of the following men: J. W. Marshall, E. C. Truett, P. W. White, Will Hale, and C. A. Mitterer.

CRAZY DRUNK HE SLAYS TRAVELER

Denver, June 22.—While crazed from the effects of vermouth, John Bello, an Italian barber, shot and killed C. V. Topp, a tailor, en route from St. Paul, Minn., to San Francisco, as he slept, and wounded Mrs. Morris Olsen and Mrs. Harry Blakesley, sisters, traveling from Marshall, Minn., to Colorado, on passenger train No. 5 westbound on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad near Selden, Kan., last night.

Bello and Patsy Longobardi, an Italian, who was traveling with Bello, were arrested and removed from the train at Goodland, Kan.

The wives and nine children of the two men came to Denver and decided today to return to Chicago instead of continuing their journey to San Francisco for which city the two families had started from Boston.

SCHOOL MA'AM DEFIES COURT; HOLDS INSTITUTE WHERE SHE PLEASES.

Special to The Oklahoman.

Guthrie, Okla., June 22.—Because Miss Ella G. Baker, superintendent of schools of Beaver county, had the nerve to hold her county teachers' institute at Guyton, a railroad town, instead of at Beaver City, inland county seat, she is threatened with imprisonment by the county authorities for contempt of court. An order, restraining Miss Baker from holding the institute at Guyton, was issued by Probate Judge Meese, but nevertheless, Miss Baker held the institute at Guyton. She claims this was done because the teachers from over the county could attend at Guyton, whereas they could not at Beaver City.

Miss Baker, who was elected on the democratic ticket two years ago, as was also Probate Judge Meese, was a recent candidate before the democratic primaries in Texas county (one of the new counties carved out of Beaver by its constitutional convention) but was defeated, although Guyton, where she is now holding the county institute, is the county seat of Texas county. She says her defeat is the fact that she has persistently refused to make smaller school districts in that locality, for the reason that the population and taxable property were not sufficient to support smaller districts.

"BUSHYHEAD" WOOD KILLS ONE, INJURES ANOTHER AND THEN ESCAPES.

Special to The Oklahoman.

Muskogee, I. T., June 22.—"Bushyhead" Wood shot and killed Tom Townsend at the home of James Lowry, two miles south of Tahlequah. The trouble came up at a dance where there was a lot of whisky. Wood shot Townsend through the heart, killing him instantly. Wood also struck Frank Townsend over the head and he may die, while a brother of Wood was seriously injured.

Wood escaped and has not been captured. He stabbed a man named Peterson about a year ago, but came free on a plea of self-defense.

All the parties concerned in the killing last night are prominent.

DEFENDERS ASSUME AGGRESSIVE LIFE STRUGGLE IN MID-FIELD

Haywood Defense to Endeavor to Prove Revenge Orchard's Murder Motive

Boise, Idaho, June 22.—The closing of the case of the state leaves the battle against and for the life of William D. Haywood in mid-field, and from now forward the sides change—the defenders assume the aggressive, the prosecution are on the defensive. The state will carry its case on through an aggressive cross-examination and then present testimony in rebuttal, but its main proposition and showing are already before the jury. As to the Steuenberg crime, which is the one specifically charged against Haywood, the state has made the following showing:

Jack Simpkins, member of the executive board of the Western Federation of Miners, went to Caldwell three months before Steuenberg was murdered. He traveled under the assumed name of "Simmons," and lived with Orchard. He left Caldwell at the end of a week's stay and later returned for a brief visit of less than a day. His presence and movements are shown by independent witnesses and the registers of hotels where he stopped.

Haywood sent $100 to Simpkins on December 21, 1905, nine days before the murder of Steuenberg, and an assigned letter, sent from Denver on December 30, 1905, and showing by its address "to Thomas Hogan" that the writer knew the address of Harry Orchard, contained the statement that "that" had been sent to "Jack" on December 21, 1905. Orchard testified that Pettibone, one of Haywood's co-defendants, wrote the letter.

Without making any request legal aid was extended to Orchard within two days after his arrest, through Attorney Fred Miller of Spokane.

Four letters were sent to Mrs. Orchard, the second, at Cripple Creek, three by Orchard and one by Haywood, at various times in 1905, and it is claimed that they not only show evidence of a plan to concoct Orchard's whereabouts from his wife, but was part of a plan to make an alibi for him. Orchard swore that Haywood was a party to the plan and that to carry it out Paddy Mullany, a member of the federation at Cripple Creek, undertook to deliver the two letters he wrote at Denver and dated at San Francisco, and that Marion Moore, a member of the federation board, carried the third letter he wrote to Nome, Alaska, and there posted it. The letter, which was produced, with its envelope, bore the following:

Indian Maids with Wealth Want Husbands Who Can Do Things

Milburn, I. T., June 22.—The fact that twelve Chickasaw Indian girls wrote to the president of an eastern agricultural college and stated that they wanted white husbands who can run a farm has attracted so much attention that inquiry has been made as to the sort of girls they are and what they expect of a husband.

In the first place the girls are real, live, handsome humans. The secretary of the commercial club at Fishington has the names of the twelve locked up in a bank vault in Fishington, along with the seven official copies of the new state constitution, and he is keeping them guarded just as closely.

These descendants of the aborigines who declare they will marry only white men each own an allotment valued by the government, originally at $1,000, but in reality worth three times that amount and often more. They own the land in fee simple and the government has made it impossible for them to get rid of it for 25 years.

What they want is some one who knows how to make the land do business.

The girls agree to furnish the land. They have got to know whom they are dealing with, however, before he is given a home and a free swing on the farm. The girls want some one who can till the soil and make two bales of cotton grow where only cockle burrs and constitutional delegates, politicians and candidates have previously thrived. Triflers, ex-candidates, politicians and wielders of the yard stick need not apply. Those only who know how to be handy with a cow, and can run a straight furrow with a mule and a double-shovel plow are wanted. The young white man who can slap an agricultural implement in the face and make it behave, knows how to make a farm crop get busy, can tame a threshing machine until it will come to life and eat out of his hand, and can hold his own with any other man in the township in a fist fight, is the individual these maidens are pining for.

These girls possess all of the native pride of their race and their ambition is to make happy homes. They are mostly college girls, have soulful eyes and the regulation straight black hair when it is not "fussed up." Their fathers have long since discarded the tomahawk and the scalping knife, but they are now armed with double soled brogans and any young white chap who thinks he can marry one of their daughters and then loaf around the "teepee" while his wife chops the cotton.

"I was walking down the Price tracks," said Sims, "when I met 'Frenchy' and Battle. He immediately assaulted me with a heavy iron bar while she stood across the track and urged him to make a finish job."

Logan heard the scuffle and came running towards us. When he saw that I was being assaulted he pulled his gun and shot several times."

TOLD CONVENTION OF THE NEW CONSTITUTION

KATE BARNARD RETURNS FROM NATIONAL CHARITIE MEETING HELD IN MINNEAPOLIS.

Miss Kate Barnard, democratic candidate for state commissioner of charities and corrections, has returned from Minneapolis, Minn., where she has been attending the meeting of the National Board of Charities and Corrections, as delegate from Oklahoma.

While attending the convention, Miss Barnard was accorded an honor which is very seldom conferred upon a delegate. She was invited to address the entire assembly and did so, in what was declared by the Minneapolis papers to be the best address made during the session.

"I made my strong point by advocating and showing the constitution of the new state of Oklahoma," said Miss Barnard. "These people have been fighting their own legislatures for years to get embodied in their laws just what our constitution contains so I talked to that assembly about the constitution and urged the delegates to tell their neighbors when they got home that Oklahoma would have the best fundamental law of the world."

MAJORITY FAVOR COMBINED TOWN

CITY CLERK OF CAPITOL PRESENTS ARGUMENTS IN FORM OF ANNEXATION.

A majority of the taxpayers of Capitol Hill are desirous of being annexed to Oklahoma City and do not believe that in becoming a part of this city their taxes would be increased, according to Dr. W. H. Clement, city clerk of Capitol Hill.

He avers that the petition being circulated has been signed by nearly every representative business man in the town and that there are only 12 or 15 citizens who refuse to sanction it.

Mr. Clement names as some of the signers: The American State Bank of Capitol Hill, Scribner & Stevens, groceries; Caldwell & Rogers, groceries; Sage Grocery company, C. S. Leeper Lumber company, Snowgrass Grocery company and T. D. Brandon, drugs.

"The biggest fear against annexation is being raised by non-resident property owners who live in Oklahoma City," said Mr. Clement. "They argue that it will raise taxes."

"The fact of the matter is that the tax levy in Oklahoma City is less than 1 per cent higher than ours, which is nearly offset by our school tax, which is 25 mills, while in Oklahoma City it is but 18 mills."

"Besides, there are 100 things which would be improved by annexation."

"At present we have a loose school system and are unable to hire first grade teachers. Our salaries range from $20 to $60 a month and hardly enable the instructors to live."

"We have no high school facilities. As a part of Oklahoma City we would be benefited by the best and largest public school system in Oklahoma."

"We have no street lights, no paving facilities or no adequate police protection. By annexation to the city it would open a way for the installation of all these municipal improvements."

"One of the biggest propositions for Capitol Hill and also for Oklahoma City is the paving of some street to connect with the river bridge, thus affording an excellent mode of ingress and egress to Oklahoma City's markets."

"The county refuses to pave this street, because it figures that more good would accrue to Oklahoma City than to any other community in the county."

John Shields, of the Shields real estate agency, has raised $3,000 in subscriptions, which it is estimated will pay half the cost of the proposed paving.

"Should Capitol Hill become a part of Oklahoma City it would be an easy matter to authorize this paving, and be the means of increasing Capitol Hill real estate fully 50 per cent."

"We people in Capitol Hill are loyal to Oklahoma City and want the citizens there to know it. We feel that the annexation would be a benefit to both municipalities and earnestly hope it will be accomplished."

That the non-resident property owners want Capitol Hill to become a part of Oklahoma City and are working hard to bring this condition about is the contention of Dr. W. C. Lennan, who resides at 217 West Grand avenue, Oklahoma City.

"It's all back about the non-residents of Capitol Hill being afraid of higher taxes," said Mr. Lennan. "What if it does increase a little? It will raise the value of our property more than enough to make up for it."

"A few old fogies are talking against it, but they advance no reasonable argument and harp on a few scare subjects calculated to turn the residents of the hill against Oklahoma City."

"Oklahoma City has made Capitol Hill, and it is no more than right that the residents there should be ready to do everything possible to help the big town."

LARGE PROFITS SHOWN BY COTTON OIL MILLS

Special to The Oklahoman. Shawnee, Okla., June 22.—After a continuous run of eight months the cotton seed oil mill at Shawnee has closed down for the season. During that time it has handled close to 11,000 tons of cotton seed in the manufacture of oil. The revenue from the mill for the eight months amounted to $250,000. A vast amount of the mill's products is exported. Fifty per cent of the hulls is used to fatten cattle at the mill. All the exports are via Gulf ports.

At the annual meeting of the Farmers' Cotton Oil mill at Mangum, held recently, a dividend of 40 per cent, covering the past season, was declared, the most remarkable showing in the history of that mill.

Your difficulty is more than half solved when you have thought of an Oklahoman want.

If You Haven't Invested in Culbertson's East Highland Addition Yet

It must be that you have not investigated the property carefully, or that you do not understand the situation properly.

Shrewd investors who have looked into the merits of Culbertson East Highland have been unanimous in their opinion that the prices of lots are extremely low, and that without exception the early investors in this new addition are going to reap phenomenal profits.

At the present time the eastern portion of the city is on the eve of the most wonderful development in the history of Oklahoma City and the remarkable feature of this development is that it is well deserved and also permanent, because it is based on the actual intrinsic merit.

Culbertson's East Highlands

Watch the eastern part of the city's progress and development. Her future will surprise the real estate world.

The change that is taking place in the sentiment towards the eastern part of the city, fairly amounts to a revolution.

This flood tide of sentiment is not visionary or fictitious. It is not a temporary affair. It is solid, lasting, permanent and real and is expanding at a rate that will sweep everything before it because its values are based on actual merit that cannot be questioned.

NURSE AND BANK PRESIDENT ELOPE

GRATEFUL PATIENT WEDS GIRL 45 YEARS YOUNGER THAN HIMSELF.

Webster, Ia., June 22.—Frank Fitzmaurice, president of the Citizens' bank of Eagle Grove, eloped in an automobile with Miss Nellie Ferguson, a pretty 20-year-old girl, who nursed him through a recent illness. The courtship began in the sick room two months ago, and a few days ago Mr. Fitzmaurice was discharged from the hospital, having fully recovered. He drove to Webster City from his home in Eagle Grove in an automobile. Miss Ferguson was waiting for him at a trysting place and the two were married by a justice of the peace in a nearby town. Their secret marriage created a sensation here. The parents of the girl did not suspect a romance, because there is a difference of 45 years in the ages of Fitzmaurice and his bride. They will go to Honolulu for their honeymoon trip.

SOIL SUITED TO TOBACCO GROWING

ASSERTED THAT GRADE IS EQUAL TO THAT PRODUCED IN VIRGINIA.

Special to The Oklahoman.
Muskogee, I. T., June 22.—J. P. Connors, of Canadian, who has lived in Indian Territory for 25 years, has conducted more experiments than any other man in the territory upon plants, cereals and fruits adapted to Indian Territory soil and climatic conditions. Mr. Connors has kept a complete record of all such experiments and his files of data reveal a great many undeveloped resources that sooner or later will create established industries. Mr. Connors furnishes the following information upon tobacco which promises to become one of the biggest money producing crops in the new state. "Tobacco has never been grown in commercial quantities in the Indian Territory, but the plant has been in cultivation here as long as any farm products. Each of the five tribes of Indians brought seed of the plant with them from their homes east of the Mississippi river. The plant is cultivated in every part of the territory and is remarkably well adapted to our soil and climate. In fact, there are very few sections in the United States so well adapted to the culture of tobacco as ours. Men who have been large producers of tobacco in Virginia state that they have grown just as good a quality here as it is possible to produce in that renowned tobacco section.

"Twenty-five years ago every Choctaw who pretended to have any crop at all had his crop of tobacco. Sometimes he kept a supply several years ahead, having learned by experience that age improved the quality of the tobacco. I knew one Choctaw farmer who made a specialty of growing a fine quality of tobacco. He would let the women look after his other crops, but he would allow no one but himself to touch his tobacco crop. I spent a few months at his place and became interested in his tobacco culture. His soil was a light sandy loam ideal for the plant. He grew the Burley, or some of the lighter varieties, claiming that they cured more readily than heavier grades. He sought to produce a mild article and succeeded in doing this by letting the plant bloom before topping it, and when he cut the top he removed the lower leaves, thus insuring a crop of uniform quality.

"He always cured a quantity of snuff, which he mixed with his tobacco for smoking. This blend produced a delightful smoke, agreeable alike to the smoker and to those who did not indulge, and by comparison made a 'perfecto' smell like a wool hat in fire.

"But with a soil and climate suitable, I doubt if at this time it would be advisable for our farmers to embark extensively in the tobacco growing industry. In commercial quantities, the tobacco growing industry in the United States is at this time completely in the grasp of the tobacco trust as it is possible for it to be and there is no other market that can be reached. This has driven tobacco growers to the torch and dynamite in the tobacco producing sections and is not a very encouraging prospect to open up a new producing section on.

"In an open market, tobacco would be a desirable crop rotation for the farmers of Indian Territory. There is no danger of its going out of style or losing its grip on the American consumer. In spite of preachers' prayers and threats, the consumption of tobacco is on the increase the world over. And like some other vices, the more civilized a nation becomes, the more it consumes tobacco per capita annually and in Holland the average consumption per capita is seven pounds.

"But even with this tremendous consumption, I think the farmers of Indian Territory should invite no scrap with the tobacco trust, not at least until they have settled with the railroad trust and a few others like coal and lumber that are now on hand."

BATTLE FOR LIFE NOW IN MIDFIELD

postmark of Nome. Haywood's letter to Mrs. Orchard bore the date of November, 1905—at which time Orchard and Simpkins were at Caldwell—and made the statement that the last writer had heard of Orchard he was in Alaska. Aside from the word of Orchard, Haywood's letter stands alone and there is nothing to show that he was not himself deceived or that he was only helping Orchard in the less harmful act of deceiving Mrs. Orchard. Through Orchard's letter runs the suggestion that the federation officials are keeping Mrs. Orchard supplied with funds, but this, too, rests on Orchard's word.

Haywood, Pettibone and Orchard are located together on two or three occasions in Denver, between the spring and fall of 1905, and Orchard lived at Pettibone's house, as a guest during the month of August, 1905.

Showing Made by State.

Articles from the Mines Magazine and some testimony as to the Cour d'Alene strike of 1899 show animus toward Steunenberg on the part of Haywood and other leaders of the federation. On the general conspiracy set up in allegation by the state, the general showing has been as follows: Orchard has been traced through all of the more important movements connected with the alleged attempt on the life of Fred Bradley at San Francisco, by independent witnesses, and his story of the poisoned milk has been carried down to the chemist who analyzed it. It has been independently shown that while Orchard was at San Francisco, Pettibone, using false names, telegraphed money to him twice through the Postal Telegraph company, and that a registered letter or package was sent to San Francisco from Pettibone's Denver address under one of the names used by Pettibone in sending one of the telegraphic remittances. Other than by Orchard's word it has not been shown that the Bradley explosion was caused by a bomb.

The casing of the so-called Peabody bomb has been produced and its history largely proved by outside witnesses from the time it was made in Denver until it was dug out of the ice in the Cour d'Alene river. Miss Peabody confirmed one detail of the story Orchard told of one of the attempts to shoot her father, and Orchard's story of his journey to Canon City to kill former Governor Peabody is given general confirmation by the evidence of William Vaughn, who was Orchard's traveling companion. Orchard went to Canon City ostensibly as an insurance agent and the state has produced a letter of recommendation written to the insurance company for him by Pettibone.

Strengthening Orchard's Story.

The discovery of the Goddard bomb has been established, but the earlier history of the bomb and all of the plot centering around it rests on the testimony of Orchard. Reason for animus against Justices Goddard and Gahbert has been shown by decisions adverse to Moyer and the labor interests in Colorado.

Orchard's story of the first descent into the Vindicator mine is corroborated by the cigar, which Orchard encountered and attempted to kill.

Orchard's testimony as to the Independence station outrage and the murder of Detective Lytle Gregory stand practically alone. His story as to the Vindicator outrage is in part supported by outside testimony.

Two general circumstances that have claimed general attention are the showing that soon after the Vindicator explosion Orchard joined Moyer as a bodyguard and accompanied him on a trip to southern Colorado, and the fact that Orchard spent the month of August, 1905, as a guest of Pettibone, at the latter's home in Denver.

The chief corroborations of Orchard's testimony has been as to things he did and the time and manner of his doing, and it is contended by the defense that aside from his testimony there is not a single piece of independent evidence against Haywood or any fact that independently connects Haywood with the crime charged or any other crime.

Counsel for Haywood will not outline their defense until Monday morning,

SAYS GREEN BUGS WILL NOT BOTHER NEXT YEAR

Special to The Oklahoman.

Patrow, Okla., June 22.—J. M. Hately of Patrow, miller and wheat grower, makes the prediction that the Oklahoma farmer will not experience another siege of the green bugs, or wheat-bug, next season. He believes that the lady bug has fixed it so that there will be very little danger of the green pest. He makes this statement after visiting and inspecting numerous wheat fields in Woods county. He says a lady bug works upward on a stalk of wheat, cleaning it entirely of green bugs as it works. He finds the lady bug so thorough systematic in its work that when the green bug again shows its head, it will find its old enemy still at the old stand and doing business.

Mr. Hately believes that one thing that made the devastation of the wheat fields so easy for the green bug this spring was the fact that the wheat had been pastured too closely, thus leaving the plants tender and in good condition for the bug to work upon. He advises that great care be taken in the future in pasturing the crop so that the same mistake will not be made. If the wheat is permitted to grow, as it naturally should, he maintains that when the time for the bug comes the wheat will be too hard for it to work upon. He also maintains that the green bug will work farther north next season.

SIX CHILDREN OF ONE FAMILY CHRISTENED

YOUNG NAMED AFTER SHIP ON WHICH PARENTS CAME TO AMERICA.

Dressed in pure white, six children, all members of the same family, the youngest of which is named America Cananda, after the land of her parents' adoption, and the ship in which they came to this country, will be christened this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock in St. Paul's cathedral by Dr. J. H. Davidson, the rector.

Mr. and Mrs. William Greenfield, the parents of the children, emigrated from England three months ago. The trip to this country was made on the steamship Camerica.

Shortly after their arrival and while they were yet in New York their youngest child was born and today will receive a name significant both of their emigration and the land of the free.

Bessie, the oldest child to be christened, is 15 years old. Leo is 10 years old, Jessie, eight, William Jr., 4, Millie, 2 and America Cananda, the baby, not quite three months.

COUNCIL WILL WAIT ON MAYOR'S RECOVERY

"The city council will not undertake any thing except regular routine business next Monday night," said L. J. Land, acting president of the city council, yesterday.

COPS WILL PLAY FIRE FIGHTERS

ANNUAL BASEBALL GAME BETWEEN POLICE DEPARTMENT AND FIREMEN NEXT WEEK.

Have you seen 'em? Policemen or firemen going through the motions of men playing baseball and making vain efforts to swat a 'leather peller' with a hose nozzle or a cop stick.

Baseball teams selected from the police and the fire departments are going to play baseball at Sportsman's park next Sunday afternoon. The heads of the departments will do the 'pill tossing' for their respective teams.

Every day at 4:00 o'clock Chief Kessler of the fire department leads his squad of valiant warriors into the street and practice is begun.

"Sizzle it over," cries heavyweight Estes who does the receiving act and the fire fighting doubles up like a human lemon squeezer and shoots the 'spaulding' over a coil of hose which is posing as home plate.

"That's a good conception," hollers 'Shorty,' who does the coaching stunt as Estes slides the ball to second baseman Tony and the athletic chief splits, like a real baseball player, into the path of his glove.

Then Tony tosses the ball to the chief and the whole performance is repeated.

While all this has been attracting the attention of curious spectators on South Broadway, Police Chief Post takes his squad into the jungles of the city jail yard and there prepare for the trouncing they say they are going to give the firemen.

The ball game will be called at 3:00 p. m., providing the players on the two teams say, enough persons have paid the sum of 25 cents to give at least each man on the two squads a first class supper.

Last year the coppers won the annual game from the firemen, while two years ago the fire boys carried off the honors. This game is the last of the series for the championship.

MAN WANTED HERE IS ARRESTED IN CUTHRIE

C. BURG CHARGED WITH PASSING WORTHLESS CHECK—HIS COMPANION ESCAPES.

Deputy Sheriff Lucas went to Guthrie yesterday and served a warrant on C. Burg, who is wanted here on a warrant charging him with working a confidence game.

Burg and Alfred Mittinger were recently convicted in the district court of Logan county, on a similar charge, and given a sentence in the penitentiary. Their cases were appealed to the supreme court and they were granted new trials. Since that time until Friday they have been in the Logan county jail. Friday they succeeded in fleeing bond.

Sheriff Garrison held a warrant for the two men based on a complaint made by an old man from Kansas, who identified the men as the ones who defrauded him of $30 with a worthless check. When the Oklahoma county officer heard that the men about to be released on bond he notified the Sheriff of Logan county that he held a warrant for them, and asked him to re-arrest and hold the men. If they made bond, Deputy Lucas says that Sheriff Murphy was prevented from doing this by Judge Burford, who told him he had no right to arrest them unless he had a warrant for them.

Lucas succeeded in locating Burr yesterday in Guthrie, but could not find Mittinger. He was told that Mittinger had boarded a Katy train for this city, but other local officers met the train and failed to find him.

NEGRO "THROWN OUT," TO GET NO MONEY BALM

Olympia, Wash., June 22.—The state supreme court today reversed the judgment for $400 recovered by Lewis A. Chase, colored, against Rudolph Knabel, a Tacoma restaurant keeper. Chase sued for damages for being thrown out of the restaurant and for denial of civil rights. The court holds he had eaten at the restaurant for 14 years and there is no proof of denial of any civil rights; that he was ousted by waiters because they believed he was annoying or insulting a woman customer. The court says a restaurant has a right to eject any person who annoys or insults a customer.

WAR GUNS STILL, COMEDY GOES ON

JACK MARTIN GONE BUT HE WILL COME BACK, SAYS
STATE.

The theatrical war has taken a week's end vacation. Manager Stater promises a rousing musical comedy for a week from tonight in the Putnam theater, Putnam Park.

"I am about through talking," said Stater. "This long delay has been a good deal, but the way things have worked out I have had to make arrangements for some new leading folk and they are even better than the original ones."

"No, that don't mean that Jack Martin and his wife will not be in the company. He will be there in full force. He is the life of the play."

"He is now staying in the 'Isle of Champagne' and whipping the chorus and the stage people into line. It's a joy to see that big, good-natured fellow break in a new chorus girl. The first morning she knows it all. By the second day she begins to listen. By the end of a week, when Jack comes in the room, she begins to swing her arms and beat time just to show him that she is busy."

Until the musical comedy company comes next Sunday night, the Stater company will be at the Putnam theater. The company is much the same as when it was here last winter except that some exceptionally strong people have been added to the company.

Tonight the company will put on the howling comedy, "Is Marriage a Failure?"

On Wednesday the old favorite, "Neil Gwynn," will be put on by the same company.

Leona Stater will take the part of this historical character, who has had more plays and books written about her than any other person.

"I like to take the part of Nell," says Mrs. Stater. "Everything that she does is so natural and so happy in the face of everything that it makes me feel better when I leave for home at night after taking the part. You know Nell's home for a time was on the stage and I feel as though I had been back with her behind the scenes when I take her name."

Many parties go to Putnam in the afternoon for picnics, and after their dinners near the lake, stay for the evening show.

LETTERS RECEIVED INDICATES

Oklahoma City will be filled with retailers on July 9, 10 and 11 if one-third of those who say they are coming arrive here.

Wednesday and Thursday, the secretary of the Oklahoma Retailers' association sent out 1000 inquiries to merchants over the state. Friday fifty-one answers were received in which were forty-seven acceptances of Oklahoma City's invitation.

Yesterday an additional fifty-five were received and fifty-one signified their intentions of coming to Oklahoma City during the July convention. A majority states they would bring their wives or families.

Senator La Follette will lecture Monday night at the chautauqua, Convention hall. His subject will be, "The Trusts." Prices 25 and 50 cents.

MAYOR SCALES WILL LEAVE HOSPITAL SOON

"Mayor Scales has passed a very comfortable day and is resting nicely at night. He is in excellent spirits and there is every reason to expect that he will recover rapidly," was the statement made by Dr. J. W. Riley last evening.

"Of course he remains weak from the shock of the surgical operation but his nervous condition is passing away and he is becoming interested in outside affairs, particularly making inquiries concerning municipal affairs. Tomorrow or Tuesday he will be permitted to receive visitors briefly each day. There is every reason to expect that he will be able to get forth from the hospital within ten days or two weeks."

The first session of the annual Oklahoma City chautauqua will be held this afternoon at Convention hall, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, when Dr. Frank Gunsaulus, the famous Chicago educator and divine, will deliver a sermon. Tonight he will give his celebrated lecture upon the life and untimely fate of Savonarola.

A feature of both sessions today will be music rendered by the Ladies' Harmony orchestra, an organization of women which is well known all over the country.

The chautauqua sessions will last until July 4, and during that time Bryan, Folk, La Follette, Landis and Dooliver will appear on the local platform.

Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock T. M. Holcomb will deliver his lecture on "The Four Square Man," and tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock Senator Robert M. La Follette will lecture, taking for his subject, "The Trusts."

Senator La Follette is known as the arch enemy of the trusts and combines in the United States senate. As governor of Wisconsin he did much to eradicate the monopolistic regime in that state, and established a reputation which finally landed him in the upper house of congress. He is a forceful and entertaining speaker.

Dr. Gunsaulus arrived yesterday afternoon over the Frisco, as did also the members of the Ladies' Harmony orchestra.

FAILS TO RETURN.

Since leaving the city for Pine Bluff, Ark., in pursuit of her husband, whom she believes had stolen away her two children from this city, nothing has been heard from Mrs. Edie Brown by any of her acquaintances in this city.

Mrs. Brown was employed in the Up-to-Date Laundry and claimed that her husband had deserted her, about two weeks ago. Wednesday afternoon she complained to the sheriff that her spouse had returned to the city and carried away their two children while she was at her work. She left the next morning for Pine Bluff, saying that she was going there in pursuit of her husband.

Investigation of the Great Murder Mystery Leads In Many Directions

MEADOWS MURDER PRESENTS THE FOURTH DEEP MYSTERY

The Meadows murder mystery is the fourth affair of its kind in the history of Oklahoma county during the past ten years.

Preceding the assassination of Meadows, the one attracting most attention because of the remarkable circumstances connected with its perpetration, was the killing, on the evening of December 28, 1899, of John Nulk, a well-to-do German farmer living at fifteen miles southwest of this city. Nulk's lifeless body was discovered in the bed of his lumber wagon about two miles west of Oklahoma City on the Reno street road as it was being drawn homeward by his span of mules. His skull was crushed and life was extinct when the body was discovered. Although the county authorities exhausted every known resort and kept skilled detectives employed on the case for months, no clue was ever discovered that led to the arrest of his slayer or slayers. But one arrest was ever made in the case, and that was based wholly on suspicion. The arrested man was released at his preliminary hearing.

John Nulk was one of the earliest settlers of Oklahoma county, having removed here from Richardson county, Neb., shortly after the opening. Through industry and frugality, he had amassed considerable wealth, owning several good farms in the vicinity of Yukon, Okla., and an interest in a plow factory in Oklahoma City.

Large Wheat Grower.

He was one of the largest wheat growers in the county, and on the day of his murder, he and two of his sons had hauled to this city three wagon loads of wheat which he sold at the old planter mill in the southern part of the city. Hitching their teams in the alley in the rear of the planter hotel, Robinson and Reno, the father and sons spent the day in the city. Toward evening the sons prepared to go home, and spent several hours looking for their father.

Falling in their search, they went to where their teams were left, and hitching them up, started on their trip home, expecting him to follow when he was ready. In going to and from the city, there were two roads from the Nulk farm which they used indiscriminately. On the evening of the murder, the two Nulk boys chose the ridge road, as it was known, striking southwest from the western portion of the city.

Some time after his son's departure, in the early part of the evening, the elder Nulk hitched his team of mules to the wagon and started to his home, choosing the opposite road to that taken by his sons. This last that was ever seen of him alive was on the Reno street road, a short distance west of the present location of Delmar garden at the little bridge crossing the old river bed.

Strange Weapon Used.

Somewhere between that point and a mile beyond, where the body was discovered, the circumstances show that some one climbed into the rear of the wagon and struck down the unsuspecting farmer with a deadly blow in the head from some strange piece of machinery in the form of an iron bar. This bar of iron is still in the county attorney's office of Oklahoma county and is not the least mystery connected with the murder. Although it has been examined by dozens of expert machinists, so far as is known, none of them have ever been able to determine definitely from what character of machine it was originally taken, or what its original use had been.

A dozen different theories were worked out by the officers, but none of them ever materialized sufficiently to warrant arrests. One clue is said to have been pointed to a business man of Oklahoma City who had been involved in questionable business deals with the murdered man and is known to have been threatened with arrest by Nulk because of alleged irregularities. Another and the one finally accepted by most of the officers employed on the case was that Nulk was murdered by persons living in Oklahoma City, but that the motive was robbery.

"Nulk was known to be a man of considerable means," said W. H. Taylor, who was prosecuting attorney of Oklahoma county at the time of the murder. In discussing the case last night, "He owned several good farms and raised lots of wheat. It was generally known among his acquaintances that he was in the habit of carrying large sums of money on his person. He had been known to have sold three loads of wheat at a good price the day of his murder, and I believe, from a searching investigation into all the circumstances that could be discovered, that he was murdered by some one whose motive was robbery."

Headless Body Found.

Less than six months before the murder of Nulk on August 5, 1898, the headless body of a man was found lodged against a sand bar in the South Canadian river, about a mile and a half southwest of town. The body was first discovered by John and Goldie Elison, who were fishing in the river. The find was reported to the officers and an immediate search was made for the head belonging to the lifeless trunk.

The next day the head was found in the river, some distance from where the body had been discovered, wrapped in a pillow sheet, with a frightful bullet wound in the back part of the skull. After some delay the disinterested remains were identified as those of a J. E. Clark, a journeyman shoemaker who had been a resident of the city at various times since its establishment.

A search of the surrounding country disclosed the scene of the murder about 150 yards south of the Wheeler park bridge, across the Canadian. The axe was discovered with which the head was brutally chopped from the body, and remnants of burned papers and clothing showed where an attempt had been made to destroy whatever would furnish a clue to the murdered man's identity.

When discovered, the body had been stripped of all clothing but a shirt, and was wrapped in about a dozen yards of rag carpet.

Circumstances immediately pointed to robbery as the motive, as it was known to have had about $500 in gold and some currency on his person. After months of persistent work by the county constabulary, William Curtis, Thomas Yoder and William Trone, alias William Jackson, all three known as bad characters and suspected of horse stealing, were indicted for Clark's murder.

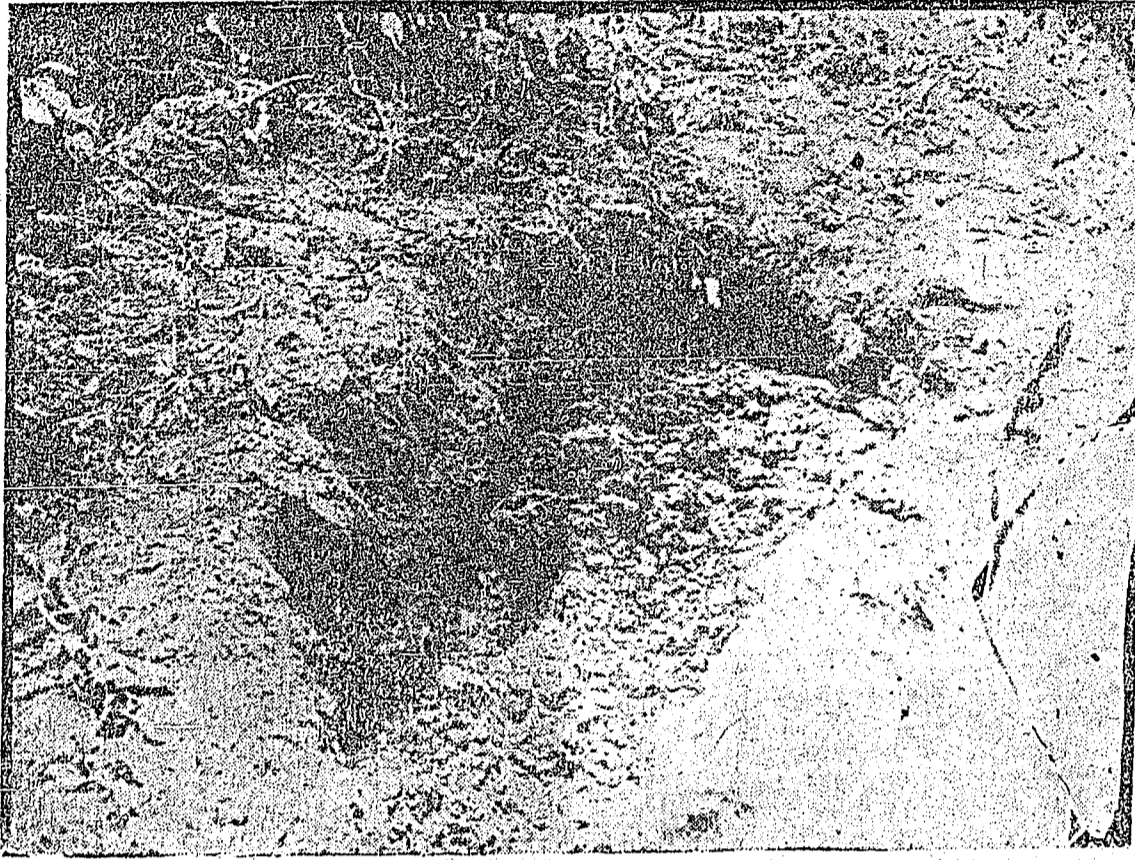

Yoder and Curtis were convicted and are each now serving life sentences in the Kansas penitentiary. Trone or Jackson was not captured until a year or two after the crime, and the prosecution against him was dismissed because of the absence of witnesses. In his statement Jackson declared that a fourth man, named Harry Gamble, was guilty of the murder. Gamble was never arrested for the crime.

Kansas Cityan Slain.

During the winter of the year 1900, W. D. Davis, a resident of Kansas City, Mo., was murdered in the northeastern part of this county, near Arcadia, and his body concealed in a deep gully in the side of a hill. It was more than two months after his disappearance before his body was discovered, and in the meantime, James Saylor had been arrested on suspicion, and was being held for his murder.

Davis was a man of considerable means, and had been in the territory several months looking for land. Saylor was a common laborer whom Davis brought with him from Missouri. Davis had a light wagon fitted up for camping purposes, and in it the two men traversed the greater portion of Oklahoma. At the time of the murder, they were staying with a cousin of Davis, near Arcadia. The two men went on foot to the postoffice one evening, and some time afterward Saylor returned to the home of Davis' relative and said that Davis had been called immediately to Guthrie, and had taken the stage from Arcadia. He gathered up the missing man's belongings, hitched up his team and left, ostensibly to rejoin Davis at Guthrie. Arrived in that city, he sold the outfit, went to a bank and impersonating Davis, succeeded in drawing and having cashed a draft for more than $400 which Davis had to his credit in the bank at Guthrie.

Suspicion finally became aroused among Davis' relatives, and an investigation was set on foot. Saylor's arrest followed, and on the day that the officers arrived with him from southwestern Missouri, where he had been captured, the body of Davis was discovered and identified. So badly had the body decomposed in the two months it was in the ground, that identification was only possible through the shape of the teeth and the clothing. Saylor escaped from the county jail before the time for his trial and returned to the neighborhood of his crime, where he stayed all night with a farmer. In going to the farmer's house, it was necessary for him to pass the exact spot, where, ten weeks before, he had murdered Davis by shooting him in the back of the head.

The next night he stole a mare from a relative of his victim, rode it into Missouri and sold it. When finally taken he was about 30 miles southeast of Kansas City. Saylor was convicted of murder in the district court, and is now serving a life sentence at the Lansing penitentiary. Revolving as these murders were, the death penalty has but twice been imposed in the district court of Oklahoma county. The only legal hanging that has taken place here was that of a negro named Milligan in 1905, who was convicted of the murder of an entire negro family. Thomas Queenan was sentenced to hang for the murder of his wife in 1902 but later his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

MORGUE VISITED BY THE CURIOUS

HUNDREDS OF MORBID PERSONS SEEK TO VIEW MEADOWS' DECOMPOSED BODY.

Hundreds of persons visited the Marshall undertaking rooms at 120 North Broadway and asked to be permitted to view the body of James R. Meadows. All day a crowd of morbid curiosity seekers thronged the sidewalk in front of the place and blocked the entrance to the building. "We have had more than 100 requests from persons in no way connected with the case, and who never saw Meadows, to view the remains," said one of the employees of the undertaking establishment yesterday afternoon. "There are always plenty of people who seem to have an abnormal curiosity to see all the horrors that there are to be seen, and they never miss an opportunity of this kind."

Only employees of the telephone company and persons who were acquainted with Meadows and who had a personal interest in the case, were permitted to see the body, but the fact that they were not allowed to view the corpse was not sufficient to drive away many of those who hung

CLAIRVOYANT'S POWER OVER RUDOLPH TEGELER UNUSUAL

Was his belief in the wonderful clairvoyant powers of Mrs. R. Myers of Elk City, Okla., a friend and former companion of Mrs. James R. Meadows, one of the things which has caused Rudolph Tegeler to become implicated in the murder of the Meadows woman's husband, and does this belief of his constitute one of the strongest holds which Mrs. Meadows holds over the man whom she has led a willing captive at her chariot wheels for more than a year?

This is one of the questions that the officers who are working on the Meadows case, are considering.

Tegeler has confessed to his associates at the pumping station that he stood in great awe of the powers of Mrs. Myers and that he believed that she was able to learn anything that she wished concerning his actions.

"Tegeler has told me that he was afraid to do anything without telling Mrs. Meadows of it," said Charles Roberts, one of his associates at the pumping station. "He stood in positive fear of Mrs. Myers and I am certain that anything that she suggested to him, he would do. He often told me that he received letters from Mrs. Myers, telling him what he had been doing a few nights before, where he had been and how he had spent his time. According to him, she always seemed able to tell him when he and Mrs. Meadows had been together, and, to his mind, this seemed to be proof positive that she was possessed of wonderful powers."

There is a possibility that when the officers complete their investigation of the case it will be shown that this Mrs. Myers is possessed of intimate knowledge concerning the case, and that Tegeler's belief in her clairvoyant powers has been worked upon to make him a tool of persons who wished to use him to further their own ends.

The letters which Tegeler now admits that he wrote, in which the crime was described, and in which a rough diagram giving the location of the body was included, were addressed to Mrs. Myers in Elk City. Some one there returned them to Chief Post in this city and by him they were turned over to the detectives who were in charge of the search for Meadows' body.

Mrs. Meadows has denied positively that she knows Tegeler, or that she has any knowledge of any letters that he has written. She denies that she has sent any communications to the chief of police in Oklahoma City and has refused emphatically to discuss the affair.

The officers are extremely doubtful of the truth of these assertions of Mrs. Myers, and her record is being investigated. They believe that there is a suspicious connection between the fact that she is known to have such a strong influence over Tegeler and that he was induced by some one, he says, whom he claims not to know, to write these letters which were returned to the chief of police here.

There is a possibility that Tegeler was induced to write these letters and that they were secured with the express intention of saddling the crime on him, in case the occasion should arise, and that it is the intention of the people who are really behind the entire matter to leave him to bear the brunt of the whole affair.

The officers believe that it is with this idea that Mrs. Meadows has denied all knowledge of Tegeler, and they are of the opinion that it is her intention to cast him off.

Tegeler's companions at the pumping station say that the woman has secured most of his money during the last ten months, and that he turned over nearly all of his monthly checks to her, reserving only a small portion for himself to meet actual living expenses.

When the officers searched Mrs. Meadows' rooms at 111½ North Broadway yesterday morning they found a hypodermic syringe, used for the injection of morphine or cocaine. Officers who have been working on the case say that since Meadows' disappearance, at least, Mrs. Meadows has been using drugs. They have evidence of frequent calls which she has made upon local drug stores for articles of this kind.

When the search was made yesterday morning there was also found $300 in money, seven gold rings and a pair of diamond ear rings. These were placed in a hand satchel and taken to the county jail, where they are still held in the custody of the sheriff.

Col. J. W. Johnston, one of the attorneys for Mrs. Meadows, demanded yesterday morning that these articles be turned over to him, but the sheriff refused to comply.

Tegeler, Mrs. Meadows and Miss Keith are kept locked in separate cells at the county jail, and no opportunity has been given them to confer together.

The object sought to be gained by this treatment, however, has been defeated by the fact that the attorneys of the three persons have been allowed to visit them at will. Col. J. W. Johnston and E. E. Reardon are acting as attorneys for all three of the accused persons, and they go from one to another constantly.

"SWEATED" DURING FUNERAL

As the hearse bearing the murdered body of James R. Meadows drew away from the undertaking establishment at 120 North Broadway a few minutes after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Lila Meadows, the wife of the man whose body was at that moment being taken away for final interment, stepped from the door of the county attorney's office in the court house, a half mile away, where she had just been subjected to a searching cross examination by county Attorney Hayes in regard to her knowledge of the brutal murder of her husband.

The body, pitifully mutilated and in the last stages of decomposition was borne away to Fairlawn cemetery, where it was buried.

The woman, her face as inscrutable as that of a graven image, and with apparently no feeling of emotion for the fate of the husband whom she knew that she would never see again, was led back to the cell in the county jail which she has occupied since having been taken there soon after her arrest yesterday morning, on the charge of being implicated in the death of her husband. She will remain until she succeeds in proving her innocence of the charge against her and is released, or is taken away to another prison to serve a long term of years for her participation in the affair.

In another cell at the county jail sat Rudolph Tegeler, the man for whom Mrs. Meadows has sacrificed her husband's love and who usurped Meadows' place in the affections of his wife.

His features, like those of the woman, were without emotion, and as he sat calmly in his cell, to all appearances unconcerned about the sordid outcome of the case, he evinced as little feeling as though he were a disinterested party.

The third member of the strange trio whom the officers have in custody, is a fitting companion for Tegeler and Mrs. Meadows. With a bright smile on her face, seemingly as happy and care free as though she were going out on a pleasure excursion, she was led from her cell to the county attorney's office when her turn came. Through the long and searching examination the smile remained and she confidently protested her entire innocence of any of the details connected with the murder of J. R. Meadows, and her ignorance of the possible participation in it of either Mrs. Meadows or Tegeler.

The only mourners being the employees of the construction gang for the Pioneer Telephone company, who had worked under him, the Meadows funeral was held in the Marshall undertaking parlors yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The officials of the telephone company provided the funeral and bore all of the expenses. Two hacks sufficed to carry the few men who accompanied the body to their final resting place and a wreath of white blossoms and evergreen was the only floral tribute. This, too, came from the men who had worked with Meadows and who were sincerely attached to him.

The services at the undertaking parlors were extremely brief. Rev. J. H. Smith, of the First Christian church, officiated. The reading of a passage of scripture and a few remarks on the uncertainty of life by the pastor formed the entirety of the proceedings, and the march to the cemetery was commenced.

There the body was lowered into the grave, by the men who had worked with Meadows, and the party returning to the city.

IF MEADOWS WAS MURDERED WHILE DRESSED, WHY WASN'T HOLE FOUND IN HIS SHIRT?

The post mortem held over the body of James R. Meadows has developed facts which make the officers at work on the case more uncertain than ever in regard to the manner in which Meadows came to his death.

One of the bullet wounds enters the body just at the base of the breast bone, ranges straight through the body and makes an exit in the center of the back.

The shirt which Meadows was wearing at the time that he left his home, and which was on the body when it was found, shows no signs of having been penetrated by a bullet. There is no hole over the wound, in either the front or back of the shirt, and the only conclusion which the officers can arrive at is that Meadows was not wearing the garment when the shot was fired.

The officers have been of the opinion ever since work on the case was begun that Meadows was called from his home, on the night of his disappearance, and murdered on the outside, and that his body was then carried away and secreted.

But the fact that the shirt shows no signs of a bullet wound has compelled the officers to doubt the reliability of this theory. Meadows could not have been wearing the shirt at the time that the shot was fired, and the only supposition which can be reached, which is justified by all the facts, is that Meadows must have been murdered after he was disrobed, either in his own home in Capitol Hill or after having been called to see door, without being given an opportunity to dress.

It is not at all probable that the fatal shot was fired while Meadows was in bed, for there were no blood stains on the bed clothing, or anywhere else in the house. To all appearances when the officers visited the house, they found it just as Meadows had left it when he was called or taken away and there was not the slightest sign of a struggle.

Three wounds, either of which would have been sufficient to have caused Meadows' death, were found on the body when the post mortem examination was held yesterday morning by Coroner R. F. Schaefer and Dr. L. A. Riley. In addition to the bullet wound entering at the left corner of the mouth, which was plainly discernible when the body was exhumed Friday night, there was the gun shot wound in the center of the chest, and a fracture on the left side of the skull. The last had evidently been inflicted with a heavy club or some blunt weapon, and the blow was probably struck from behind. It is likely that Meadows was first knocked unconscious by the blow on the head and that the two shots were fired afterward.

The bullet which entered at the corner of the mouth ranged upward and was found at the base of the

TEGELER'S UNCLE DOES NOT BELIEVE HIM TO BE GUILTY; HIS REVOLVER IS MISSING

Charles Tegeler, of 304 West Sixth street, both uncle and stepfather to Rudolph Tegeler, and at whose house the latter has been living since the death of his wife more than two years ago, declared last night that he did not believe his stepson guilty of the murder of J. R. Meadows. "I did believe there might be something to it," said Mr. Tegeler, who speaks with a slight German accent. "When I first saw the account in the papers I thought Rudolph might have had something to do with it, but since I talked to him at the jail this afternoon, I don't believe that he did."

"I told him when I talked to him, that if he were guilty, the best thing he could do would be to own up to it right away, and get the matter over with as quickly as possible. He told me, 'I had nothing to do with it' and that was all the answer he gave me."

"If Rudolph is innocent, how do you suppose it was possible for him to guide the officers to the spot where the body of Meadows was buried?" was asked the elder Tegeler.

"Well, you see," says he, "I had a chart of the locality showing it down to the very feet and inches. Rudolph is the boy has hunted rabbits and quail over every foot of that entire neighborhood."

"Was Rudolph in the habit of carrying a pistol?" was asked.

"No, he was not. I never knew him to."

"He owned a pistol did he not?" "Oh, yes, he has owned two or three at different times."

"Do you know where his pistol is now?"

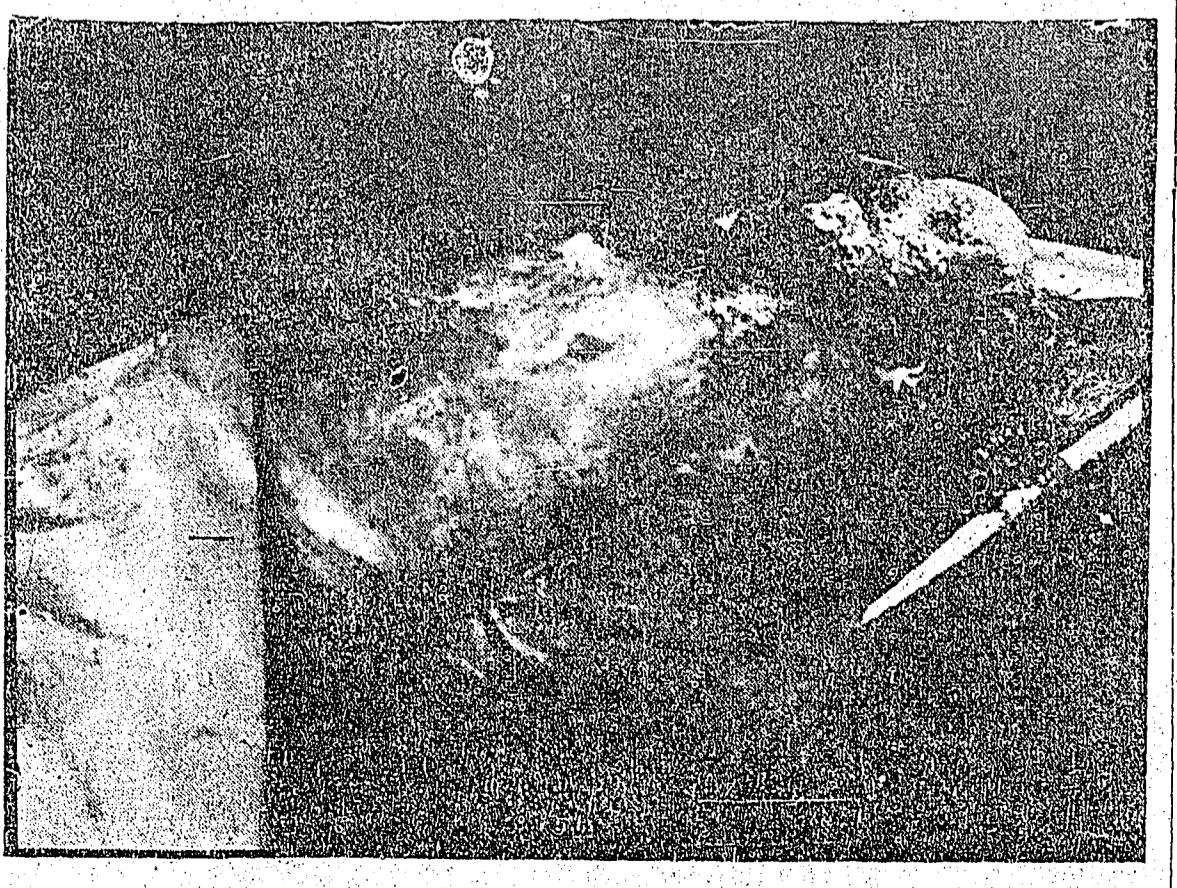

"No."

"Do you suppose it is in his room here in your house?"

"No, I know it isn't for we have searched all over the place thoroughly. I told his brothers when this thing first came out in the papers that I wanted to find his pistol and see what had been fired out of it, but we could find nothing of it."

The Tegelers have lived in Oklahoma City for more than six years, coming here from Iowa. Charles Tegeler married his brother's widow. Rudolph Tegeler is a son of Charles Tegeler's wife's first husband.

Neighbors of the Tegelers say that they have always been hardworking, industrious and apparently honest peo-

COMPLETE THEORY OFFERED IN MEADOWS' MURDER CASE

On a tangled skein, taken thread by thread and pieced together, the Meadows case, in theory, has become a straight line of evidence. As it is interpreted with new facts that are being gathered up, the theory is being shaped into a moose, at one end of which will be the murdered man, and at the other, the murderer. It is not that the pair will spend their remaining days behind the dark, forbidding walls of a prison. Here is the theory of the Meadows murder case. Twelve men will decide whether it is true; when, in the district court of Oklahoma county, the accused face court and jury and answer to the charge of murder.

On the evening of June 4, 1907, James R. Meadows killed his wife. He was going to the Capitol Hill place, he told her, to do some work. He might not be back that night. He had forgotten the storm of the past and the domestic horizon was clear. He was in a cheerful mood when he left the house. Mrs. Meadows' parting caress had lifted the shadow that sometimes hovered about the private apartments of this man who was going to his doom and this woman whose illicit love was claimed by another.

While Meadows was en route to Capitol Hill, Mrs. Meadows called for a messenger boy. She hurriedly wrote a note, and when the messenger boy arrived she told him: "Take this to the address on the envelope."

In less than an hour a buggy was halted in front of the Meadows' downtown home, 1104 North Broadway. Mrs. Meadows had been pacing the floor in front of the window, nervously awaiting the arrival of the messenger. She looked down the stairway, smiling at the arrival of the messenger. She climbed into the buggy and drove out into the country.

"My husband has been unkind to me, I can stand his brutality no longer," said Mrs. Meadows to Tegeler. "As they drove along the quiet highway she related a story of domestic infidelity. She had grown tired of her husband since the man who had been to her father's place in his law office in her heart."

"I wish that he were dead," she said. "My husband has wandered away. I believe that he is temporarily deranged," she told the officers and the newspaper men.

But when the officers and the newspaper men had waited for several days for a more definite explanation of the strange disappearance, and Meadows had not been heard from, an investigation was started.

Mrs. Meadows had a new theory a short time after that. She no longer believed that Mr. Meadows had left of his own accord.

"I believe that my husband is dead," she said. Tegeler called upon her in the meantime. They had held earnest conversations. Perhaps they had agreed to flee together.

Tegeler went to the bank and drew out his money on Thursday afternoon. Accompanied by Mrs. Meadows, he intended to make their departure that night. They changed their minds quickly; nobody knows why, because, on the same afternoon, Tegeler took his money back to the bank and redeposited it.

Mrs. Meadows also had plenty of ready cash on hand, it having been found in a grip in her room. They would have left before many days, had they been given an opportunity to do so, but they were hemmed in on all sides by the police.

Tegeler intended to kill himself before being arrested, but the officers came before he expected them. The motive for the crime is: Tegeler loved Mrs. Meadows. Mrs. Meadows did not try to induce him to spare the life of her husband, of whom she had grown tired.

KILLED MULES; JAILED.
Special To The Oklahoman.
Mangum, Ok., June 22.—Ben Thomas has been sentenced to serve 30 days in jail and pay a $100 fine for shooting two mules belonging to Dr. Austin of Granville. Thomas objected to the length of the sentence because it would imprison him during the Fourth of July celebration.

Since the revelations relating to the murder of James R. Meadows have been given to the public, it is likely that peculiar circumstances under which Tegeler's wife is alleged to have died, will be investigated.

Neighbors, who resided near the Tegeler home on West Ninth street, recall that Rudolph Tegeler's wife died under peculiar circumstances about March 25 of last year. It was Sunday, and in the afternoon, Tegeler and his wife were driving. They returned at about 6 o'clock in the evening. When taken from the buggy upon her return the woman appeared to be suffering as from an apoplectic spasm. Tegeler called a physician and the latter caused the woman's removal to St. Anthony's hospital, where she died two hours later.

MYERS CASE LIKE THAT OF MEADOWS

SOME OF DETAILS STRIKINGLY SIMILAR TO THOSE IN OLD TRAGEDY.

Not least some of the details, the Meadows case appears to resemble the famous Myers murder case in Kansas City, which occurred May 11 of last year. The Kansas City case has gained a notoriety all over the country on account of the harrowing fight made by the attorneys for Aggie Myers to save her from the gallows, and in which they were at last successful, securing a commutation of the sentence against her to life imprisonment from Governor Folk only a short time ago.

Clarence Myers, an ex-convict, was murdered by his wife and her lover, Frank Hotman. James Meadows was murdered, and it Mrs. Meadows was not actively connected with the commission of the crime, the officers believe that she was at least cognizant of it and that she was one of the instigators in the affair.

Rudolph Tegeler, who apparently occupied the same position with Mrs. Meadows that Hotman did with Aggie Myers, is strongly suspected of having committed the actual murder, and if he did not do so, it is a certainty in the minds of those who have had the investigation of the case in charge, that he is implicated in it.

In the Myers case the first clue which led to the arrest of Mrs. Myers came from her lover and accomplice in the crime, Hotman, who confessed.

The first clue in the Meadows case came from Tegeler, who admits that he was Mrs. Meadows' lover, when he led the officers to the spot where the body of the murdered man had been buried.

In the Myers case, Mrs. Myers told a story of having been awakened by two negroes who entered the room where she and her husband were sleeping, of having been held by one of them while the other fought with her husband and killed him. She asserted that she loved her husband, that she had always been true to him and that there had never been any trouble between them.

Mrs. Meadows, too, asserts that she loved her husband, and that their domestic life was a happy one, and that she was never untrue to him in any way.

Mrs. Tegeler's death as being very suspicious.

Mrs. Tegeler, I should judge, was about 35 years of age, and had appeared to be in excellent health up to the time she returned home ill after driving with her husband on that Sunday afternoon.

TEGELER'S WIFE ALLEGED TO HAVE DIED SUDDENLY AFTER TAKING RIDE WITH HUSBAND

Since the revelations relating to the murder of James R. Meadows have been given to the public, it is likely that peculiar circumstances under which Tegeler's wife is alleged to have died, will be investigated.

Neighbors, who resided near the Tegeler home on West Ninth street, recall that Rudolph Tegeler's wife died under peculiar circumstances about March 25 of last year. It was Sunday, and in the afternoon, Tegeler and his wife were driving. They returned at about 6 o'clock in the evening. When taken from the buggy upon her return the woman appeared to be suffering as from an apoplectic spasm. Tegeler called a physician and the latter caused the woman's removal to St. Anthony's hospital, where she died two hours later.

Horace Gannaway, a traveling salesman, who resides on the northwest corner of Ninth and Harvey streets, last night related the story of Mrs. Tegeler's peculiar death.

"Tegeler and his wife resided in the house adjoining the alley just west of where I live on Ninth street," he said. "I remember the circumstances of Mrs. Tegeler's death because of the fact that I and my wife were summoned to the Tegeler home shortly after Mr. and Mrs. Tegeler had returned home from a drive that Sunday evening. I think it was about 6 o'clock in the evening when we were called, and we went to the Tegeler home with Dr. Arthur W. Whit and his wife."

"Mrs. Tegeler had been taken from the buggy by her husband and appeared somewhat in the condition of a person who is attacked by a fit of apoplexy. Tegeler told us that it was the result of a paralytic stroke and said that her mother had died from a similar attack. Dr. White suggested that she be removed to St. Anthony's hospital at once, and I recall that Mrs. White and my wife bathed the sick woman's face, as she had been frothing at the mouth in a peculiar manner. The afflicted woman did not speak a word that I recall, while we were there, and I do not think she spoke to any one from that time until her death, which transpired at about 8 o'clock that night."

Charles Tegeler, who is the uncle on the same time the step-father of Rudolph Tegeler, having married the latter's mother, says that Rudolph's wife was a Mrs. Elizabeth Hansell, and came to Oklahoma City from some point in Texas about the year 1900. "Betsy" Hansell, as he called her, was accompanied by her sister, and they were working as dressmakers. Rudolph Tegeler at that time lived with his mother and step-father, and Mrs. Hansell and her sister boarded at the Tegeler home. Fifth and Harvey, for some time. "Betsy" Hansell had a living husband then, or one who claimed to be her husband, and he was also in Oklahoma City at that time, but later went to Texas. "Betsy" Hansell followed shortly afterward. When she returned to Oklahoma City she said she had secured a divorce from Hansell.

Rudolph Tegeler had also gone to Texas, where he had been in charge of an electric lighting plant in some small town, so he said.

What has become of Hansell? No one appears to be enlightened on this point.

When "Betsy" Hansell returned from Texas to Oklahoma City she was shortly afterward followed by Rudolph Tegeler, and he announced to his mother that he intended to wed Mrs. Hansell.

At that time Rudolph Tegeler was a little more than 21 years old. Mrs. Hansell was about 35 years of age. Tegeler's mother and step-father seriously objected to the marriage and a family rupture occurred.

Tegeler married Mrs. Hansell and they moved into the property he owned on West Ninth street. Until Mrs. Rudolph Tegeler's death, the two families did not associate.

In the light of recent events, there has developed a well defined suspicion that Mrs. Rudolph Tegeler not only may have died from poisoning. It is probable that her body may be examined and subjected to an inquest.

Coroner Shaefer, referring to this matter, said that it would not be impossible to discover traces of certain poisonous chemicals in a body even after it had been buried for more than a year. Another physician, in discussing the case, said that after so great a lapse of time the soft tissues of the human body would be decayed to such an extent that analysis would be practically impossible, particularly of the stomach.

CAUSE RESIGNATION.

Philadelphia, June 22.—Because he appeared in his pulpit wearing unpressed trousers and because his facial lines had impressed some members of his congregation as "harsh and forbidding," the Rev. Dr. James H. Enoch has been forced to resign from the fashionable First Unitarian church, Twenty-first and Chestnut streets. He preached his farewell sermon today to what he termed "a bridge whist coterie, a pink tea party." Dignified members made a hurried exit from time to time, noses in air.

"Many ministers," said Mr. Enoch, "are resenting the demand for a simply neutral decorative ministry, a ministry punctilious, a ministry that tips toes gently and gracefully at 4 o'clock teas and smiles benignly at the bridge whist tables, a ministry whose pulpit country people call "Fox-fire"—a pale phosphorescent glimmer, the product of decayed words.

"Another important question is that of salary. The average man without an independent income has no business in the average pulpit.

"Many of our so-called important and aristocratic churches are regularly begging from a fourth to a fifth of their preaching from their ministers. The minister frequently gives off at the end of the year a large percentage of his salary to meet the ever recurring deficit in the parish finances."

STORM AT NIGHT ENDANGERS LIVES

"TWISTERS" WHIRL OVER COMANCHE COUNTY, DOING CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE.

Special to The Oklahoman.

Lawton, Okla., June 22.—Two small twisters visited this country late last night during one of the hardest and most general elemental disturbances of the history of this section.

Two miles east of Junction City and in the vicinity of Tulsa several houses were wrecked. Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Cull and a young man living with them were seriously injured. East of this and in the vicinity of Duncan and Comanche, wind, hail and rain caused a heavy damage. Crops were destroyed a few houses were wrecked and several hundred yards of Rock Island track were washed away.

One-half mile of track near Comanche was submerged this morning. Several residences were wrecked in the southwest part of Lawton. The inhabitants escaped injury by being in cellars.

Prisco railroad camp, two miles west of here, was blown away and three men were lifted into the air and carried several rods.

Considerable damage to crops by hail is reported from several communities.

REFERENDUM VOTE TO BE PROVIDED

Denver, June 22.—The convention of the Western Federation of Miners today practically agreed upon a constitutional amendment providing for a referendum vote by any local union before a strike is called and requiring a two-thirds vote in the affirmative to authorize a strike.

Under the present system, a strike may be ordered by any union when three-fourths of its resident members vote in favor of it and their action is ratified by the executive board. The constitution is also to be amended so as to render a member eligible to represent his local as a delegate to the annual convention after a year's membership. Two years' membership has heretofore been required.

An amendment to the constitution was adopted prohibiting unions or individual members of the locals from making a labor contract with employers.

Several minor amendments to the constitution were adopted.

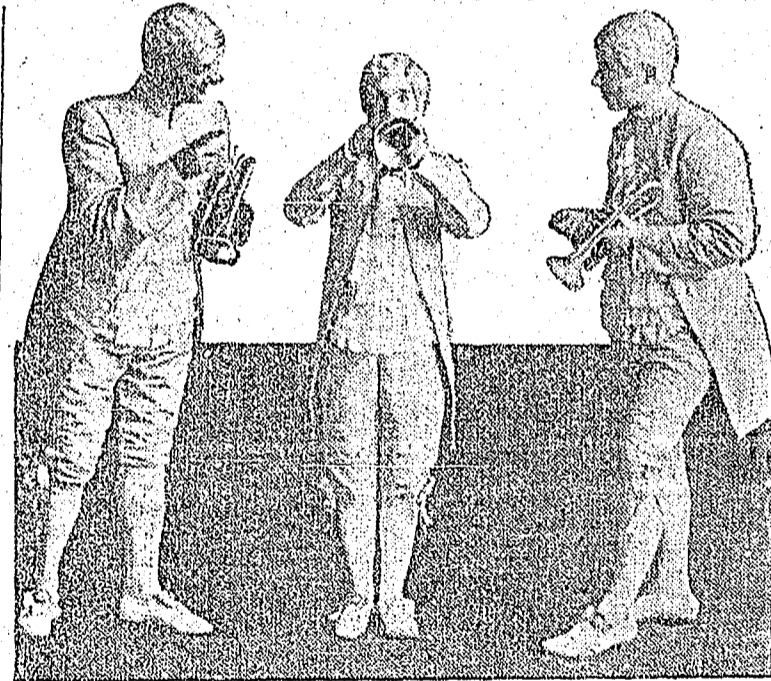

The real fight of the convention has been scheduled for next Monday morning. This will come over the committee reports on the annual statement and recommendation of Acting President C. E. Mahoney. Majority and minority reports will be submitted. This Mahoney report carries a majority of the important questions before the convention, including the severance of all connections between the federation and the Industrial Workers of the World.

President Mahoney himself is said to favor the separation of the two organizations.

KILLED AS HE TRIES TO STOP A RUNAWAY

DILL, Okla., June 22.—The ten-year-old son of William Lerner, living near Dill, was instantly killed while trying to stop a runaway team. The horses ran him down, crushing his life out. With other children the boy was playing in the yard, when a girl's sunbonnet blew off, frightening the team and causing them to run away.

"BIMM, BOMM BRRR"

European Novelty Music Act at Delmar this week.

Vaudeville will be the attraction in the Delmar theater today and as strong a bill as the park has had this season will be offered. Six acts will be offered, add from the Orpheum circuit and the cost of the headliner of which will aggregate more than the ordinary cost of a whole show to Manager Shoupole.

This act is recognized as one of the greatest of comedy in the vaudeville is that by McWaters, Tyson and company. Another turn that is distinctly prominent, is the musical novelty stunt known as Bimm-Bomm-Brrr, an importation into this country from the celebrated Music Hall of London.

Others on the banner bill are Collins and Hawley, singers and dancers; The Great Dentons, aerial act; Grey and Peters, comedy cyclists and Mellos, juggler supreme.

Today's matinee will start at 2:30 o'clock to make way for the ball game.

Denver, N. Y., June 22.—William Cledenne, former member of the Canadian parliament and once mayor of Montreal, was cut in too by a train here.

"I am writing an article," he said, "on 'The Way to Manage a Woman.'"

"I suppose it will be a long one," she replied in a slightly scornful tone.

"No," he answered, "it will be quite short. In fact it will consist of only two words—Don't Try!"

DR. MCKANNA'S 3-DAY LIQUOR CURE

CURES TO STAY

DOCTOR M'KANNA

Discoverer of the Only Successful Treatment for the Liquor Habit.

Clipping from Drovers Telegram Kansas City, Mo.

The Doctor McKenna method of treating drunkenness, which has accomplished such wonderful results since opening in Kansas City, was established in 1891 in Houston, Tex., by Dr. McKenna. This form of treatment was discovered by Dr. McKenna, who practices it exclusively. It is not the Keeley cure and has no resemblance to any other treatment, neither does it cause any of the bad after effects produced by some of the so-called cures. In the Dr. McKenna method of the work is all done through the stomach. No hypodermic injection is used, neither is there a disagreeable course of treatment to cure through. Three days' treatment effectively cures the most advanced stages of alcoholism, after which the patient is discharged, a simple tonic is given for two or three weeks to rebuild the entire system. The desire for drink is checked in a few hours, and at the end of three days the cure is complete. During this period the patients are given all the liberty they desire. There is no confinement at any stage of the treatment, and patients spend their evenings at home.

TAFT RETURNS TO NATION'S CAPITAL

Washington, June 22.—Pretty well tired out, yet in good health with the exception of a hoarseness in the throat, Secretary of War Taft returned to Washington from his western trip this afternoon. The secretary felt immediately to his home, where he saw some of the officials from the war department who had pressing matters which required his action.

Mr. Taft in recounting his western trip said that altogether it had been a pleasant, though rather a hard one. He had spent nine of the fourteen nights in which he was absent from the city on railroad trains. He said he had entirely recovered from the attack of indigestion which he had suffered at St. Paul. The hoarseness in his throat troubles him some, and during the afternoon he went to a physician's office and had the affected locality thoroughly sprayed. The secretary thinks that with adequate rest the trouble will disappear altogether in a short time.

Tomorrow the secretary will again be on the go. In the afternoon he will leave for New Haven, to attend the commencement exercises of Yale University, of which corporation he is a member. He will remain there several days, returning to this city about the middle of the coming week. Then after a brief stay in Washington he will go to Murray Bay, on the St. Lawrence river, where he will spend his vacation during the month of July.

Every Man His Own Doctor.

The average man cannot afford to employ a physician for every slight ailment or injury that may occur in his family, nor can he afford to neglect them, as so slight an injury as the scratch of a pin has been known to cause the loss of a limb. Hence every man must from necessity be his own doctor for this class of ailments. Success often depends upon prompt treatment, which can only be had when suitable medicines are kept at hand. Chamberlain's remedies have been in the market for many years and enjoy a good reputation.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough.

Chamberlain's Pain Balm (an antiseptic liniment) for cuts, bruises, burns, sprains, swellings, lame back and rheumatic pains.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for constipation, biliousness and stomach troubles.

Chamberlain's Salve for diseases of the skin.

One bottle of each of these five preparations costs but $1.25. For sale by Westfall Drug company.

Coke is cheaper than Coal. $5 per ton. Phone 84.

FRENCH CAPITAL FEELS RELIEVED

GOVERNMENT HAS WINE GROWERS' STRIKE WELL IN HAND, IT BELIEVES.

Paris, June 22.—A profound sense of relief pervades the French capital tonight at the check to the outbreak in the south, which is described by ex-Premier Ribot as the worst internal crisis in France in the past thirty-seven years.

The government now apparently is satisfied that it has the situation well in hand and that the overwhelming forces of troops garrisoning the whole area effectively will present a recalcitrance of the armed revolt against the central power.

Such a mobilization of military force has not previously been witnessed in the third republic. All the towns and the majority of the villages in the two disturbed departments are armed camps.

Tonight's dispatches represent that a general surface calm prevails, although there are one or two storm centers in isolated districts. There are some evidences, too, of anxiety over possible developments tomorrow, Sunday being France's favorite day for administration. Both civil and military authorities, however, have made ample preparations for all eventualities.

CENSURED REPORTS MINIMIZED TROUBLE

Paris, June 22.—Mail advices from Lisbon show that the conflict between the police and the people June 19 and 20 were much more serious than indicated by the censured dispatches from the Portuguese capital. Cavalry had to be called out to disperse the mob, which met the charges with revolver shots. The rioters raided the cafes, armed themselves with improvised bludgeons formed of iron and marble portions of the tables, bottles and soon fiercely attacked the police and troops. The latter fired several volleys, and two of the rioters were killed and more than 100 were wounded, six of them sustaining mortal injuries.

His Own Town

LINCOLN IS BRYAN'S IN EVERYTHING BUT POLITICS.

It's Demands on Him Are Heavy, But He Struggles Along Bravely.

(Leonard H. Robbins in the Newark N. J. News.)

Lincoln is Mr. Bryan's town in everything but politics. In that regard it belongs to the pure or Nebraska State Journal faction of the republican party on those occasions when it is not owned by the Burlington railroad and the ambassador of Mexico. Here, however, is not a case of a political prophet without honor in his own country, for Mr. Bryan is the biggest politician in view from the silvery dome of the state capitol, as everybody cheerfully admits. And everybody thinks it a shame that the community in which Mr. Bryan established a home twenty years ago was fourth-fifth republican. A republican's politics, as is well known, are about as hard to change as a $10 bill in West Aboken after midnight.

Socially and intellectually Lincoln is Bryan's town indeed. Probably no public man in America is more loved and respected by his neighbors. Lincoln people are skeptical. Those persons who pose, who put on the dog and indulge in pomp and pretense, are town jokes. There are a few such, even in a town so enlightened. But Mr. Bryan does not pose. He walks the streets as any other citizen, and when he stands at a corner waiting for a car there is nothing about him that compels attention. He doesn't blow a horn or ring a bell, or strut, or swell his chest. He wears ordinary clothes and a slouch hat, and if he ever carries a cane it is when he is away on his trips.

Many men, when they attain political eminence, divorce themselves from the human race. They ride in closed carriages and dine at inaccessible clubs. They can't be touched with a ten-foot pole. Like the late Prof. Enoch, they become translated and are seen no more. But Mr. Bryan is plainly visible to the naked eye. He has not yet applied for a separation from humanity and that is one of the first reasons for his popularity with Lincoln people. They would pick a slay if they could, but there is none to find. In spite of whirlwind successes that have made him a world figure, Mr. Bryan is still one of the folk; he is still "William J." a plain, busy, good-natured citizen, in whom there is no shadow of vanity; just as he was before 1896. If he has any enemies in town they do their knocking with feathers.

There are great men in Lincoln as elsewhere, whose greatness is burdensome to their contemporaries. There are others whose mightiness, like that of Shere Khan, is dangerous to the humbler animals. Mr. Bryan's greatness, as it appears to the average Lincolnite, is neither elephantine nor tigerish, and is pleasant to look upon. He may be described among the great men of the age as a calm and heaven-pointing Pike's Peak amid a throng of Vesuviuses and Popocatepetals. What's his name down in Martinique. Mr. Bryan never raises the price of oil on anybody nor does he cause his fellow-being to shiver up with a sense of their insignificance. He is a comfortable neighbor.

The town's demands upon Mr. Bryan are many, but he struggles along bravely beneath his civic burdens. Lincoln has more conventions, national and otherwise, than any city of twice its size in the country. There are 3,000 or more college students here. There are scores of societies for the intellectual advancement of their members. Naturally a man of such eloquence and popularity is likely to be called out, after the manner of the fire department, at almost any hour of day or night, and he responds nobly.

At a recent memorial service of the Licks he made an address on brotherhood that would have sounded well as a sermon from the greatest pulpit on earth. If he is a more talking machine, as some cartoonists would make folks believe, let it be said that he gives freely of that which he hath. Mr. Bryan is one of the moving spirits of the Round Table, a club of leading men of the town, who meet to settle the gravest questions they can think up. He is active in church work. He teaches the Bible class in the little Sunday school at Normal near his farm. He gives land to the city for park purposes. And with all his service to his home town there is no ostentation.

The Democracy of Golf.

It is doubtful if there is any game played by men which has so many followers and enthusiastic devotees as golf. Baseball has, of course, earned its title to "the national game," but it is seldom played by men in business, and the rank and file of its supporters take their pleasure in filling the grand stands or bleachers, as their purses dictate, and looking on. Golf is the most democratic of all sports, in that it brings together the old and the young, the rich and the poor, the dapper, the robust—all so intent on the game that social and ostentatious lines are forgotten. I have seen playing the same day on a well known course near New York one of the richest men in the world, two of the best known supreme court judges, a surgeon of international repute, the president of one of the largest trust companies in America, a Presbyterian minister, an organist in an Episcopal church, a medical student, a clerk in a country store, and several school boys. There are thousands of business and professional men who, if it were not for golf, would be losing the stimulating and invigorating out-of-door exercise, which was, as my physician friend expressed it, keeping him from being young. There has never been another game which produces so much good fellowship as golf. Meet a stranger in traveling or on business, and if it is found that both are golfers, there is an instant bond of fellowship established, a common hook on which conversation, anecdote, and experience can be hung. If your newly made acquaintance is a golfer, what care you whether he is a millionaire or a poor man?—The Circle.

A Year Without a Summer

Is the year 1907 to be without a summer? We cannot yet tell, but there are evidences of change. In this immediate locality we have had very little winter—only an occasional day or night that would be reasonably cold.

Six weeks ago our fruit trees were in bloom, but one night nearly all fruit was ruined. Now the air is pure and sweet. The sky seems a brighter blue and nature must soon be at her best. Now, in the month of June, the grass is the greenest, the foliage of the trees is perfection, and everything is lovely.

But in June snow has fallen in Michigan, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, the states between the Missouri river and the Rocky Mountains, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and all the Eastern states. A few of the Southern states even have had snow within the last two weeks.

The year 1816 was known throughout the United States and Europe as the coldest ever experienced by any person then living. There are persons in northern New York who have been in the habit of keeping diaries for years, and it is from the pages of an old diary, begun in 1810 and kept up unbroken until 1840, that the following information regarding this year without a summer has been taken. Here are the pages from the diary:

January was so mild that most persons allowed their fires to go out and did not burn wood except for cooking. There were a few cold days, but they were very few. Most of the time the air was warm and springlike. February was not cold. Some days were colder than in January, but the weather was about the same. March, from the 1st to the 6th, was inclined to be windy. It came in like a small lion and went out like a very innocent sheep.

April came in warm, but as the days grew longer the air became colder, and by the first of May there was a temperature like that of winter, with plenty of snow and ice. In May the young buds were frozen dead. Ice formed half an inch thick on ponds and rivers, corn was killed, and the corn fields were planted again and again, until it became too late to raise a crop.

By the last of May in this climate the trees are usually in leaf and birds and flowers are plentiful. When the last of May arrived in 1816 everything had been killed by the cold.

June was the coldest month of roses ever experienced in this latitude. Frost and ice were as common as buttercups usually are. Almost every green thing was killed; all fruit was destroyed; snow fell ten inches deep in Vermont. There was a seven-inch fall in the interior of New York state, and the same in Massachusetts. There were only a few moderately warm days. Everybody looked, longed, and waited for warm weather, but warm weather did not come.

It was also drip; very little rain fell. All summer long the wind blew steadily from the north in blasts laden with snow and ice. Mothers knit socks of double thickness for their children, and made thick mittens. Planting and sowing were done together, and the farmers who worked out their taxes on the county roads wore overalls and mittens.

On June 17 there was a heavy fall of snow. A Vermont farmer sent a flock of sheep to pasture on June 16. The morning of the 17th dawned with the thermometer below the freezing point. About 9 o'clock in the morning the owner of the sheep started to look for his flock. Before leaving home he turned to his wife and said, jokingly: "Better start the neighbors soon; it's the middle of June, and I may get lost in the snow."

An hour after he had left home a terrific snow storm came up. The snow fell thick and fast, and as there was so much wind the heavy masses piled in great drifts along the windward side of the fences and outbuildings. Night came and the farmer had not been heard of.

His wife became frightened and alarmed the neighborhood. All the neighbors joined in the searching party. On the third day they found him. He was lying in a hollow on the side hill with both feet frozen; he was half covered with snow, but alive. Most of the sheep were lost.

July came in with snow and ice. On the fourth of July ice as thick as window glass formed throughout New England, New York and in some parts of the state of Pennsylvania. Indian corn, which in some parts of the East had struggled through May and June, gave up, froze and died.

To the surprise of everybody, August proved the worst month of all. Almost every green thing in this country and Europe was blasted with frost. Snow fell at Barnet, thirty-three miles from London, on August 30. Newspapers received from Buck's stated that 1816 would be remembered by the existing generation as the year in which there was no summer.

Very little corn ripened in New England. There was great privation, and thousands of persons would have perished in this country had it not been for the abundance of fish and wild game.

Such are the quotations from the 1816 diary. What the present year will eventually show we can not now know.

"Ibsen," Favorite of Americans

WHEN a short time ago I saw a Scandinavian actress play Ibsen's "Little Eyolf," supported by American actors, what interested me most was not the play, which I know not the acting, but the fact that Americans cared to see Ibsen. I know, of course, that Ibsen is becoming fashionable here, as he is England, and perhaps for that very reason, but is there really any sense in that fact? Do Americans really understand the idea Ibsen stands for, the relations between man and woman, as he sees them?

Look throughout the world and notice how strangely the nations judge one another's culture. England does not try to conceal the fact that she looks down upon the rest of Europe because she, thanks to her conceit, or rather self-adoration, can see nothing good but what is English. Note the contempt with which an Englishman uses the phrase "Made in Germany," and note at the same time the enormous immigration into England and the influx of ever-improving German goods into that country, which more and more take the place of England's own manufactures.

Compare the school in England and Germany, the political stagnation in England with France's almost irresistible attack upon the paralyzing reactionary policy of the Catholic church.

Note how little Europe understands and how strongly she condemns Asia's philosophy and thought. Note the colossal Russia's inability to understand the free ideas of western Europe and then look calmly and without bias upon America's, the promised land of freedom's evolution.

The Americans, this young, energetic people, who through their struggles with Europe and America's original inhabitants manifested a power, a self-sacrifice, unprecedented, and unequalled in history. The Americans, who during the years of peace developed an energy, which made Europe open wide her old tired eyes, the Americans who continued a revolution, which, though slowly made Europe understand that America is not a country like Germany or France, but a world of unlimited possibilities. But on the other side one must remember that these possibilities will long remain only possibilities, or, if you will, probabilities. America is not finished and will not be finished for an age, the evolution has been too rapid for that.

We all admire the young, spirited colt, the power of its limbs, its indomitable courage, but we also see that, as it is, it is not fit to be a plowhorse; it is too young and unmanageable, and we may expect it to give us unpleasant shocks—but we do admire it. Then, in contrast to the colt, look at the stolid, slow plowhorse—not nearly as interesting to look at, but it does its work quietly and calmly, and the furrows it makes in the ground are necessary to insure a good and regular crop.

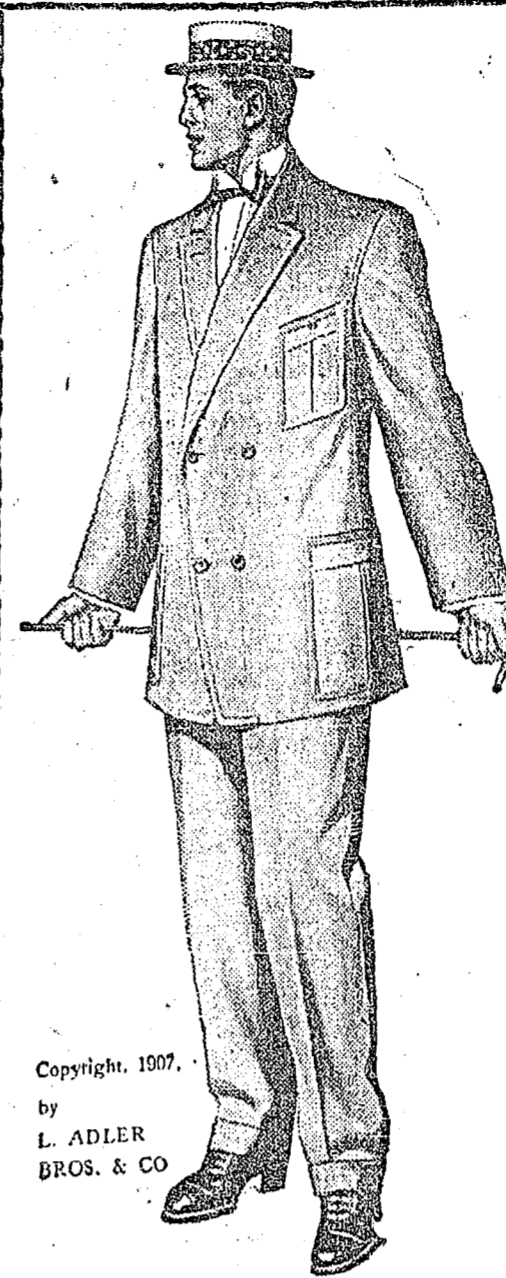

There are in these United States a great many Scandinavians, and one does not need anybody's word to assure one that America is better off for these people and needs more of them, for great is the need of plowhorses in this country, where there is so much land to be tilled.

But also for other reasons America needs the Scandinavians. One of the brother countries, Norway, has given birth to Ibsen. It is from this poor insignificant part of the globe, of whose exact location many Americans are ignorant, that men whom the world shall never forget, have come, and it is well worth the while for Americans to make themselves acquainted with the civilization (culture) of the Scandinavian countries.

Let every Scandinavian here, in his enthusiasm over America, say: "In this country every man can get a job if he wants to work." Yes, of course as long as the country is prosperous. "Here all are equal." Yes, if they have money; the equality goes no farther. "Here no man is looked down upon, no matter what his work may be." Sure enough, America is in need of hands willing to work, and for that reason will not overlook any man, who wants to work.

But to compare the difference between the influence upon the governing of municipalities and state as exerted by the Scandinavians and the American people. One immediately sees who rules in America—the corporations, the trusts, the immensely rich business men to whom and for whom the people of America pay taxes.

END OF LOUISIANA LOTTERY.

From the New York Sun.
The most gigantic gambling scheme the world has ever known now disappears in a mist of romance.

In its day the Louisiana lottery had no rival in respect of risks and gains—chiefly gains—and upon its regard the extent and magnitude of its operations. In times past we have heard many sensational stories concerning Monte Carlo, but during the last fifteen years of the life of the Louisiana lottery more money changed hands through its machinery than was exchanged through the peddlers of the Casino five times over. Not less than 30,000 human beings were supported by its activities. Millions of dollars were hoarded every month, and thousands upon thousands every day besides. In addition to the twelve big drawings every year there were the daily drawings, known as "policy," in New Orleans and elsewhere. Agents in London, New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cincinnati and hundreds of big American cities, earned enormous incomes. Employees innumerable received handsome stipends. Banks, printing presses, many other industries, waxed fat and prosperous here the daily drawings. Attorneys, lobbyists, miscellaneous corporations took part in catching the golden shower. And yet with these incredible expenses, which would have maintained half a dozen European duchies and principalities in more elegant splendor, the stockholders divided among themselves each year more millions than it would be safe to specify.

The Louisiana lottery has vanished, and in one view of the matter, behind a cloud of romance. It is even asserted on respectable authority that the controlling spirit would have abandoned the enterprise years ago when the Louisiana legislature canceled the charter and the federal government closed the mails to its activities but for a sentimental and sympathetic feeling for the army of agents, vendors and other employees and dependents who had spent their lives in the service, and who, with their families, were likely to be thrown upon the world, quite helpless and unprotected. That the so-called "Louisiana lottery" was established chiefly to provide for these unhappy creatures there is some reason to believe. There was no longer visible any considerable money for the principal—little, if anything, in fact, save paid, unwelcome expedient and unwelcome effort and anxiety. If it is true, the Louisiana lottery was established and that its tickets were hawked in this country largely, if not wholly, for the purpose of furnishing employment to a horde of faithful servants doomed otherwise to innumerable hardships, the end of the great gambling machine is no less remarkable than its ancient history.

PEACE CONGRESS WORK SATISFIES

DELEGATES ALL ENDEAVORING TO AVOID QUESTIONS THAT IRRITATE.

The Hague, June 22.—A leading plenipotentiary, speaking tonight of the situation at the peace conference, said to the Associated Press:

“The machinery is now moving, to the general satisfaction, as all the countries are sincerely animated by a desire for a reciprocal understanding and wish to avoid irritating questions, finding for each problem a formula beforehand acceptable to all. Thus the discussions will certainly be attended by earnest endeavor without disagreeable incidents.”

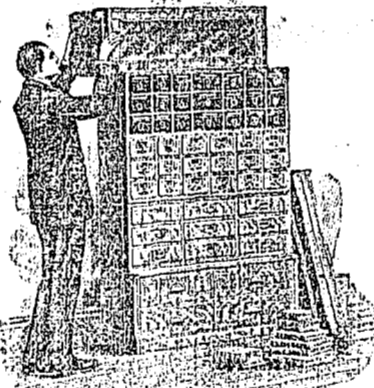

“The success of this system has been rendered easier by the delegations being entrusted to the most tactful and most distinguished men. Therefore the American proposition relating to contracted debts, which contemplates only those between private citizens of one country and the government of another, it is predicted, will be adopted with a few slight amendments.”

M. Bourgeois, president of the first committee, delivered an eloquent speech today in favor of the principle of arbitration and made an excellent impression. He gave a detailed survey of the arbitration convention of 1899, the recent adhesion to which seventeen additional nations gave the consecration of the civilized world. He expressed gratitude to Andrew Carnegie for his donation of the peace palace, and since the opening of the arbitration court the experience of all nations had shown that the working of arbitration might become daily more simple. As a natural result of it, he said, international justice had entered the domain of practical reality. Public opinion of nations had quickly grasped it and governments had become accustomed to it.

The result of the establishment of the court were seen in the 33 arbitration treaties which had been concluded since 1899 and a series of incidents which M. Bourgeois recounted. The North Sea incident and the Venezuela affair, he pointed out, were among the cases dealt with by The Hague court.

M. Bourgeois expressed a graceful compliment to the United States and President Roosevelt for their part in settling in motion the new jurisdiction. Regarding the task before the commission of perfecting the convention of 1899 he observed that the rules of 1899 might be modified to a kind of summary of procedure.

MOTHER'S MEMORY IS AN OLD SHIRT

LAD IS GIVEN HOME—CRIES WHEN HE TALKS OF DEAD “MAMA.”

Lee Stater, a bright looking lad of 13 years, who was arrested by Officer Seal at the Santa Fe station Friday night, has been given a home in the family of David P. Perryman of 235 E. First street.

The worth came from Grayson county, Tex., according to his own account, and is an orphan, both his parents having died several years ago.

“When I heard him say that he had no father or mother, my sympathies were enlisted,” said Mr. Perryman last night. “I have six children of my own, but a child without father or mother can find a home with me as long as he wants to stay and will behave himself.”

The boy told the police sergeant that he had been living with a man named Lee Garrison, on a farm eight miles southwest of Oklahoma City for the past three months. “I didn't run away from them,” he declared. “They knew I was going. I didn't like to stay with them because they scolded me so much.”

One shirt comprised the child's surplus wardrobe when he was taken to the Perryman home.

“I have taken care of it for the last two years, because it is the only thing I have to remember mamma by,” said the lad with a sob.

OPERATORS SAY IT WILL BE IMPOSSIBLE TO FILL THEIR PLACES.

San Francisco, June 22.—There is no appreciable change in the telegraphers' strike. The Western Union and Postal companies have about the same number of men working as last night and are accepting business subject to delay. They state they expect to increase their forces in a few days.

The operators claim that it will be impossible to secure operators enough to handle the business and that the companies are effectively tied up. In a statement issued tonight it was claimed that four Western Union division chiefs deserted the company today and recruits were coming in all the time.
