$300 REWARD
FOR CAPTURE OF RUDOLPH

Bank Robber Has Eluded Pursuit
With Skill Escaping the Daring Escape From Jail—Crew of Pursuers Lost Sight of Him.

BELIEVED TO HAVE CROSSED RIVER IN SKIFF

Escape Was Most Daring in Conception and Execution Ever Carried Out at St. Louis Jail—Suggested by Flag Raising.

A positive track of William Rudolph, the bank robber and alleged murderer of Frederick Geary, St. Louis detective, who escaped from jail last night, was followed by a crew of pursuers from the police department as they crossed the Mississippi River by skiffs last night and then disappeared. The search for the fugitive continued this morning.

The reward of $300 was offered for the capture of Rudolph who is a known bank robber in St. Louis. It was not until the morning of today that the pursuit of the fugitive was interrupted.

This morning the search for the fugitive was resumed.

RUDOLPH'S BERTILTON SYSTEM DESCRIPTION.

Rudolph's Bertillon system involves the recording of physical characteristics for identification purposes. It includes measurements of body parts, such as head, body, and extremities. The system was developed by Alphonse Bertillon in the late 19th century to identify criminals and others. The system is still used in some countries today.

OFFERS READERS A LOT OF RELEVANT INFORMATION.

Bertillon's system is a method of describing and recording the physical characteristics of an individual, such as height, weight, and body shape. It is considered the first modern system of identification and has been widely adopted around the world. The system involves the measurement and recording of specific body dimensions, which are then used to create a personalized profile.
