flow It Overtook Bill Rudolph After One of the Most Remarkable Man-Hunts in Criminal History—Story of the Terrible "Yen" Secret Ortsanization.

"THE CAMERA NEVER LIES"
By Chief of Detectives William D. Schumacher

The camera never lies. The photograph is the best means on earth for the identification of a person, whether criminal or not. Written descriptions are expressions of a man's mind and picture must be consulted to understand the reader. Photographs are instantaneous and more like a likeness than able to read it.

William A. Pinkerton, going through some of the laboratory records one day, found a photograph of a certain individual. The face was a little blurred, but the man's eyes and nose were clearly visible. He looked at it intently, then turned to his secretary and said, "This is a man I have been watching for some time."

"I have reason to believe," he continued, "that he is involved in a criminal transaction."

"What is the case?" asked the secretary.

"It is a matter of conjecture," replied the detective. "But I am convinced that the man in the photograph is guilty."

A few days later, the detective was called to the scene of a crime. As he entered the room, he noticed a photograph on the wall. It was the same man he had seen in the photograph at his office.

"I knew it," he said to himself. "The photograph was right."

The detective's intuition was correct. The man in the photograph was indeed guilty of the crime. The photograph had helped to identify him and bring him to justice.

"The camera never lies," said the detective. "It is a powerful aid in the detection of criminals."

"I agree," said his secretary. "It is an invaluable tool for the detection of crime."

The detective nodded and continued, "But we must always remember that photographs are only tools. It is up to us to use them wisely and effectively in the fight against crime."

The secretary nodded in agreement. "Yes, sir. We must always be on our guard and use the cameras to their fullest potential."

The detective smiled. "Exactly. The camera never lies. But it is up to us to make sure that it is used in the right way."

Chair, The Pinkerton Detective Agency

I regard the hunt after William Rudolph as one of the most remarkable we have ever undertaken. Almost every railroad in the United States was "haunted" by our men. The "yeggs," as they exist today, are far more dangerous than the old-time burglars. Where they took the old timer all night to crack a safe these tramps will do a similar job in two hours, and get away with it.

Instead of carrying heavy kits of tools, all they need is a pint of nitroglycerin, or "soup," to detonate caps, and the smallest kind of treacle in the safe door.

The "yeggs" are a dangerous menace to law and order and should be broken up.
